Smooth Return to Work As B.C. Tel Strike Ends

An 81-day strike-lockout at the B.C. Telephone Co. ended so smoothly today that a company official said it was just like any other Monday morning.

B.C. Tel spokesman Keith Mathews said in Vancouver there were no incidents or problems reported from anywhere in the province as the bulk of the 10,000-member Telecommunications Workers Union (TWU) returned to the job. All will be back at work by Wednesday.

"We're just starting a normal day," said Mathews.

The bitter and protracted labor dispute was resolved Sunday when the two sides agreed on return-to-work conditions and signed a three-year collective agreement.

A joint statement by the union, B.C. Tel and Canadian Telephones and Supplies Ltd., said the signing came after 10 hours of continuous negotiations.

"Both sides are confident that the agreement reached will be the start of a new industrial relations climate between the parties," the statement said.

At a meeting Saturday, union members voted 91.4 per cent in favor of accepting the contract.

The contentious issue of contracting-out work was resolved with a clause providing for a union-management committee to mediate disputes in that area.

Mathews said management personnel, who worked a lot of overtime during the strike-lockout, will not be allowed any immediate holidays. He said everyone will be needed to deal with the company's backlog of work.

In Victoria, a company representative said the installation of new phones and the repair of malfunctioning units will get top priority. New orders for telephone installations will be dealt with only after the backlog has been cleared.

The spokesman said B.C. Tel's construction program and the installation and up-grading of electronic exchanges will continue where they were left off.

A tentative agreement between the company and union was reached 11 days ago, but the two sides had been unable to agree on conditions governing the strikers' return to work.

At issue was the company's insistence that each member of the union sign an interim contract pledging no job action that would deter service, accept 1976 pay rates

ROAD TO RECOVERY

Premiers Urge Speedy Action

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau appealed to the 10 provincial premiers today to co-operate in designing an economic recovery plan — "an insurance policy that will serve us well tomorrow."

But some premiers said action is needed right now — not tomorrow — to deal with major unemployment and inflation.

Trudeau called for new efforts to defeat unemployment and inflation at the start of a three-day federal-provincial conference. As he spoke, there was a demonstration of unemployed outside the federal conference centre. Earlier, the prime minister, his provincial counterparts, their ministers and aides, had to thread their way past about 100 placard-waving, chanting demonstrators calling for jobs.

"Hey, Pierre, we want jobs," shouted one demonstrator as the prime minister's car nudged through a circle of out-of-work protestors.

But Trudeau said in his conference-opening statement that "Canada is not chronically ill . . . in fact Canada is on the path to full recovery."

He conceded there is economic uncertainty, indicating it is due in part to the affects of a major world recession.

Trudeau said these conditions have made Canadians understandably anxious about the future.

"This very anxiety saps our creative energies."

Trudeau said he feels the country's institutions, governments, and people are flexible enough to meet current economic challenges.

"Canada is not a sick country in a healthy world."

"Evidence mounts that in a measured way, Canada can reattain its potential with continuing reductions in both unemployment and inflation."

"Our task is two-fold — first to ensure that the recovery occurs, second to ensure that it is sustained," he said.

In a brief speech at the opening of the conference, Finance Minister Jean Chretien also said that it would take "a major national effort" to restore price stability and full employment to the national economy.

Federal officials said in advance of the meeting — the first such session open to television and the press since 1974 — that the conference is designed to dispel what they termed "a wave of pessimism" about the country's economic future.

Federal finance officials published a strategy last week for economic recovery that sets targets of 3½ per cent for inflation by 1981 and an umemployment rate dropping toward 5½ per cent by then.

But the government paper was not specific about how to reach these goals.

There have been reports that Industry Minister Jack Horner will propose a national industrial council to the provinces. It would try to develop specific policies for stimulating weak or lagging industries.

Hockey violence erupted in New Westminster Sunday when the Bruins and Billings Bighorns both cleared the benches to participate in a third-period brawl. Billings emerged 8-5 winners in a Western Canada Hockey League game that took three hours and 35 minutes to play. The loss kept Bruins six points behind second-place Victoria Cougars, who dropped a 4-2 verdict to Brandon on Saturday before a turnout of 3,418 fans. Stories on page 12.

Snowblower in Path Caused Plane Crash?

Times News Services

A Pacific Western Airlines aircraft, which crashed at Cranbrook Saturday, killing 41 people, was apparently warned before landing that a snowblower was clearing snow on the Cranbrook airport runway, a transport department spokesman said today.

The spokesman said "we understand that there was a snowblower either on the runway or just off the runway when this happened." He said the aircraft landed five minutes early.

But the air radio operator in Cranbrook has reported he informed the pilot while the aircraft was some distance away from Cranbrook that a snowblower was clearing the runway, the department spokesman said.

The pilot replied that he would speak to the air radio operator before landing so that the snowblower would be removed, the spokesman said. But as far as the department knew, the pilot did not speak to the radio operator again.

The transport department spokesman said the department must still examine the flight date recorder and cockpit voice recorder from the aircraft and the air radio operator's tape to find out more about what happened.

The tapes are being flown to Ottawa where they will be opened, perhaps later today, the spokesman said. The department does not know whether the flight data recorder escaped undamaged as it "underwent extreme heat," he said.

"On touchdown the captain saw the snowblower and attempted to abort the landing," said Jack Cooke, PWA's western regional vice-president. "He cleared the snowblower and was seen to tail off to the left. The plane exploded on the ground."

There were seven survivors among the 43 passengers and five crew members on board.

Passenger David White, 20, of Calgary, said that when the plane touched down, part of a reverse-thrust casing, a sheath over the engine that flips down upon landing to help slow the plane, came off.

"We started to climb, the plane then rocked really badly," he said. "We banked to the left — the power from the one engine that was working probably twisted the plane around."

Alan Jay, a transport department spokesman, identified the four dead crew members as Captain Chris Miles, 31, and first officer Peter Van Oort, 25, both of Edmonton, and flight attendants Cindy Jean Wolff, 21 of Calgary and Patty Wong, 22, of Vancouver.

Three of the survivors walked away from the wreckage, most of which was engulfed in an orange ball of flame that shot 60 metres into the air.

All the survivors were in the tail section which broke off as the aircraft disintegrated and slewed into a snowbank at the end of the runway.

The survivors were six passengers and flight attendant Gail Bunn, of Edmonton. She and White walked out of the tail section through an emergency door.

Once outside they found an 11-year-old girl still strapped to a three-seat section beside her dead mother. The three walked to rescue vehicles.

Two others crawled through the snow to the nearby forest to get away from the fireball.

Miss Bunn and White, along with passenger Kathy Mailey of Cranbrook, were treated in hospital and released.

Cut Spending — Bennett

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier William Bennett of British Columbia called today for a new national economic policy to help Canada fit into a changing, more competitive world.

Referring to earlier remarks by some of the premiers, Bennett said the various governments "cannot just trot out regional shopping lists, as I have heard here today, but must develop a national policy."

He said the last time a national strategy had been worked out was in 1879, when the country's first prime minister, Sir John A. Macdonald, devised a program that protected and helped develop industry in Central Canada through protective tariffs.

A comprehensive national economic policy could set out a program or a set of goals that the people could rally behind, Bennett said.

He also criticized the role of government spending in the economy, saying that unless governments follow restraint, their share of the national economy will rise to 45 per cent by 1980 from about 40 per cent now.

Government programs and costs are beginning to effect the ability of the over-all economy to compete, Bennett said.

Smith Mum On Friend's Hiring

Speaker Ed Smith had only a series of no comments today when reporters asked about his hiring of friend and former secretary Barbara Pennock for a job in the auditor-general's department.

Friday in Fort St. John, where he and Miss Pennock were attending his mother's funeral, Smith told reporters he had no qualms about hiring her for a temporary position in the auditor-general's office.

But today in Victoria, Smith refused to elaborate.

Meanwhile, opposition members say Premier Bennett, not Auditor-General Erma Morrison, should conduct an inquiry into the appointment.

Opposition leader Dave Barrett said "unless we get a full explanation on the matter, we can only assume the premier was responsible for the appointment of Miss Pennock to the office."

The auditor-general is a watchdog on government spending and by definition must remain free of any political influence.

House leader Bill King (NDP — Revelstoke-Slocan) said Miss Pennock's presence compromises the integrity of the office and said she should be removed immediately.

But Mrs. Morrison is taking a different view. She said she will continue her investigation into the hiring but added she didn't expect to find anything adverse.

"I have no reason to doubt Miss Pennock's loyalty to myself or to the office," she added.

Calling the situation "a bit of a tempest in a teapot," Mrs. Morrison said there is no way the office could be damaged because Miss Pennock is not in a position to do any damage.

But she said she has to clear any suggestion that there was any political involvement.

Red Spies Have Tripled: CTV

Times News Services

Information gathered by Canadian counter-espionage agents shows that the number of Russian spies in Canada has tripled since the 1960s, the CTV television program, Prime Time Inquiry, said Sunday.

The program said more attempts are being made by the Russians to corrupt or bribe Canadians into working for the Communists.

The program said the main target of Soviet intelligence is Canada's industrial knowledge, especially in the petroleum industry.

Russian spies are in Canada to collect economic and technological information that can be used to improve industry and living conditions in the Soviet Union, the program said.

The program said that in 1965 there were 749 Russian citizens working in Canada for the Soviet government and at least 28 of them were known spies. Ten years later, there were 2,900 Russians in Canada and 60 of them are known spies.

In a related development, the Toronto Globe and Mail today quotes RCMP sources as saying the Soviet Union has a thorough knowledge of security operations in Canada.

The sources are quoted as saying the recent expulsion of 13 Russian officials foiled only one of several attempts in recent years to infiltrate security operations and the Russians have double agents in the security service.

The newspaper quotes the sources as saying the RCMP also develops double agents in much the same way as the Soviets and a communist diplomat who is about to defect is currently working for the force.

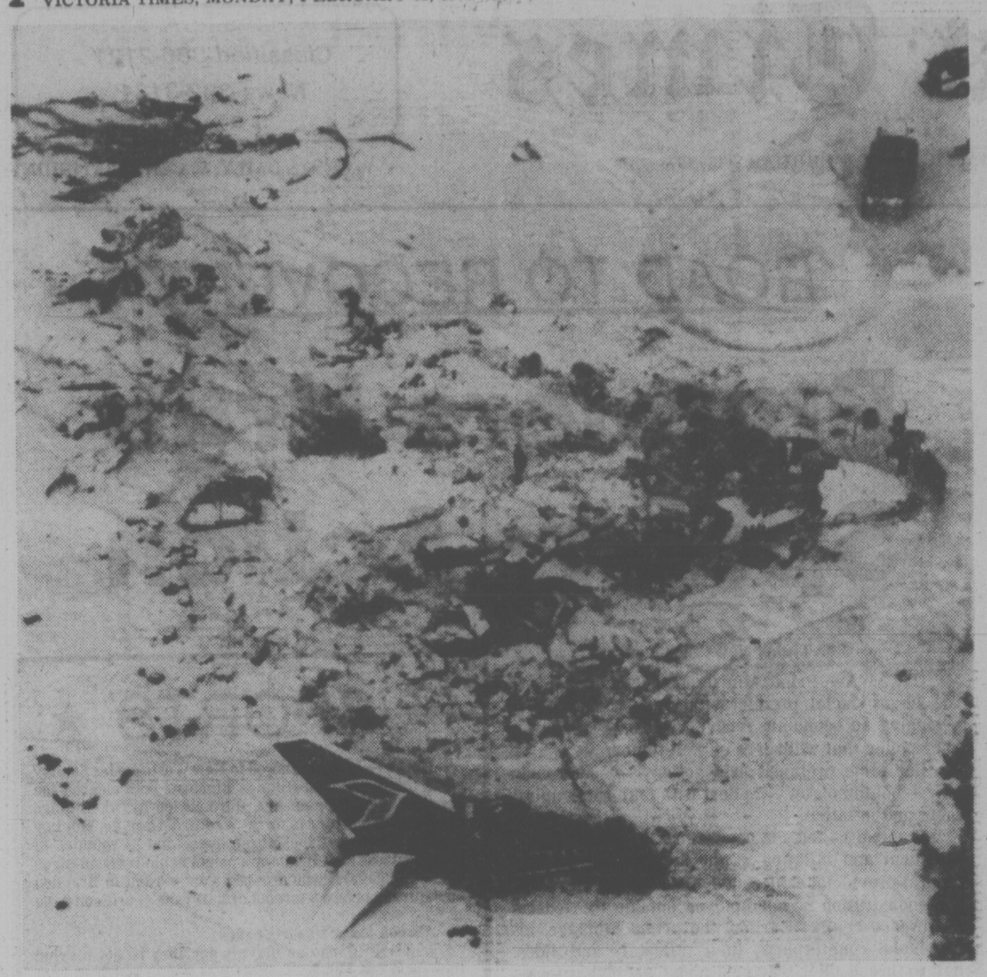
Meanwhile, at the United Nations, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said Sunday he has been kept informed by Ottawa of news reports that the RCMP had recruited a Communist diplomat as a double agent.

"I understand the RCMP has, categorically denied that later story, but I have not been personally in conversation with them about it," Jamieson told a news conference. "They say it is a fabrication."

The Edmonton Journal, which broke the story last week of a spy ring that led to the expulsion of 13 Soviet Union personnel, said the unidentified diplomat was either from the Soviet Union or from another Eastern-bloc state.

The Ottawa Journal quoted unidentified sources as saying the RCMP had enlisted a double agent said to be attached to the Soviet Union embassy in Ottawa.

Jamieson told reporters that the only thing he can say is that "we ought not to be surprised that now there will be other stories and rumors."



Accident inspectors, RCMP, mill around crash site at Cranbrook

Cranbrook 'No Hazard'

EDMONTON (CP) — Two Pacific Western Airlines pilots accustomed to landing at Cranbrook, said Sunday the landing strip in the Selkirk Mountains where a Boeing 737 crashed Saturday and killed 41 persons does not usually pose special hazards for pilots.

Phil Peskett, 40, and Lee Jasper, 29, both of suburban St. Albert, said they have no complants about the 6,000-foot runway, tucked into a valley 3,100 feet above sea level.

"There's no difference between landing there and landing in Edmonton or Calgary," said Peskett, who added that the Edmonton Municipal Airport runway where the PWA plane landed Saturday is shorter than the Cranbrook strip.

Jasper described Cranbrook's instrument landing facility as adequate although the strip has no control tower. Radio communication is provided from the terminal.

Neither pilot recalled any complants by the Canadian Airline Pilots Association (CALPA) about Cranbrook's conditions.

Although the approach to Cranbrook is through a valley lined with mountains, Jasper said there is no special danger because "it's one of the widest we go into."

The mishap was the most tragic in the history of Pacific Western Airlines.

The airline lost nine crew members in crashes of two cargo planes recently, but maintained an almost-unblemished passenger safety record until crash Saturday.

PWA, purchased by the Alberta government in the summer of 1974, had one passenger and two crew members killed in a crash of a Convair near Campbell River several years ago.

Public relations spokesman Brian Johnson of PWA said the Boeing 737 is ideal for flying conditions in western and northern Canada, especially on runways as short as 5,000 feet.

"We've maintained an accident record we are quite proud of," Johnson said. "This is an unfortunate accident."

Snowblower to Blame?

on the flight had been gobbled up by a centralized computer system—and were registered by last names only. Officials were forced to screen thousands of tickets to discover who was on the plane, he said.

PWA spokesman Brian Johnson said the plane carried some low-grade radioactive material which was destined for a Trail hospital where it was to be used in thyroid diagnostic studies. It posed no hazard, he said.

The municipally-owned airport, like many small airfields in Canada, uses an air-radio station instead of a control tower or radar equipment.

Jay said a pilot would get weather information and check if the runway was clear by calling the radio operator. He said the ultimate responsibility for landing the aircraft rested with the pilot.

Johnson dismissed as speculation comments that the crash could have been avoided had there been a control tower. He said Cranbrook was a well-run airport and the airline had no complaints.

The crash was the sixth-worst in Canadian commercial airline history and the first major accident for the Alberta government-owned airline. The last major airline crash in B.C. was Jan. 14, 1977, when 12 persons died when a Twin Otter slammed into a mountain near Terrace.

Canada's worst airline disaster was Nov. 29, 1963, when a Trans-Canada Air Lines DC-8 crashed near St. Therese, Que., killing all 118 aboard.

Meanwhile, a survivor said Sunday he remembered little of what led to the weekend crash of a ski-tour helicopter near Revelstoke in which four persons were killed and 10 injured.

"I suddenly found myself in the snow and blacked out," said Walter Smutny, 26, of Vienna, who was among the party of skiers being ferried to the Monashee range, about 120 kilometres north of that southeastern British Columbia community.

Smutny said he did not think the helicopter had acutally touched down when it went out of control, but that he couldn't explain why it fell.

Federal ministry of transport officials and an accident-investigation team were searching the wreckage to determine the cause of the mishap.

The helicopter, owned by Okanagan Helicopters Ltd. of Vancouver, tumbled down a 600-metre embankment while attempting to land the skiers Saturday on top of a 2,250-metre peak in the Monashee range.

"The helicopter apparently rolled over in soft snow and fell down the mountain approximately 2,000 feet," an RCMP spokesman said. "The machine was completely destroyed."

The RCMP spokesman said those killed were trapped inside the helicopter.

The dead were identified as Dan Hayes, 34, of Mica Creek, pilot of the helicopter, Leo Hartman of Switzerland, a ski guide employed by Canadian Mountain Holidays, skier Mike McEachern, 23, of Winslow, Me., and skier Irwin Anderl of West Germany.

Charges Loom

Charges of robbery and attempted robbery faced a Victoria man today after police reported two aborted holdups and one successful robbery at the weekend.

A man was arrested at his home in the Rockland area following the theft of about $100 from Freddie the Freeloader's store, 1537 Fort, at about 6:30 Saturday night.

Police said a man tried to hold up the Jewel Box in Harbor Square, and was foiled by a customer. Later, an attempt was made to rob Studio 35, a shop in Nootka Court, which was prevented by staff.

Deported Domestics Row

TORONTO (CP) — Immigrant women who falsely declared on applications for landed immigrant status that they had no children are being deported but federal Immigration Minister Bud Cullen denies that there has been any increased action against Jamaican immigrants working as domestics in Canada.

To acquire landed immigrant status, the women had to state that they were either single, widowed, divorced, or had no dependent children, Cullen said.

The minister said high unemployment in Canada is not the reason for deporting the women. He said the children left behind in Jamaica now would be of the age where the mother should be reunited with them.

"These women are being put into a position where they either have to go back, or try to bring their children into the country," Cullen said. "And when they do that, of course, they are indicating they made a false declaration when they came into Canada."

David Jacobs, a member of the local chapter of the International Committee Against Racism, said women have been coming from the West Indies to work as domestics since 1955 and that it always has been known that those coming from places such as Jamaica would have had children.

"The government knew about this and never did anything about these cases in the last 20 years," said Jacobs in an interview. "It is only in the last two years they have started deporting."

. . .Aliens Supplied

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The head of the U.S. immigration and naturalization service said Sunday that smugglers set up "almost like travel agencies" are providing on order illegal aliens for businesses around the country.

Commissioner Leonel Castillo said that organized crime is clearly involved in such operations.

The commissioner whose service last year apprehended about one million illegal aliens, mostly Mexican, said many of them paid smugglers about $200 to get across the border from Mexico to the U.S.

U.S. Miners Spurn New Contract Offer

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Shrinking coal stockpiles and a defeat for a proposed contract have given the United Mine Workers (UMW) new leverage in their strike.

The 30-to-6 vote Sunday against the tentative pact, taken in Washington by the UMW bargaining council, means any end to the strike, now in its 70th day, is weeks away, and emergency power preparations were begun in several hard-hit states.

A committee appointed Saturday by President Carter to find ways of bringing energy from areas of the U.S. untry which are not affected by the strike was to arrive in Canton, Ohio, today.

Canton is headquarters for the East Central Area Reliability Council, representing utilities serving 33 million customers in eight states.

Carter has declared an energy emergency in Ohio, temporarily suspending air-pollution regulations for utilities.

In West Virginia, one of the largest utilities announced that mandatory power reductions will increase 30 per cent from 10 per cent as early as Thursday.

The cut would prompt layoffs in many industries — particularly glass, steel and aluminum, which cannot operate plants at a 70-per-cent power level.

Carter also announced he was asking his cabinet to prepare plans for the movement of coal to areas where shortages are becoming critical. An energy department spokesman said the most-critical areas were in Ohio, Tennessee, Indiana and Pennsylvania.

Although the UMW produces only 50 per cent of the U.S. coal, picket lines and threats of violence and vandalism have curtailed production in many non-UMW mines.

Radical Indians Cited In Blast

SYDNEY (CP) — Newspapers blame the Ananda Marga, a radical Indian sect, for a bomb that killed two sanitation men early today outside the hotel in which Indian Prime Minister Morarji Desai and others attending a 12-nation Commonwealth summit conference were sleeping.

Six other persons were injured, but no conference delegates were among them.

Tim Anderson, a spokesman for the Ananda Marga, denied the group was responsible. Desai called the bombing a "mad act of terrorism" but did not link it to the sect.

The Ananda Marga has been committing acts of sabotage in India because its spiritual leader is held there on a murder charge.

It has also been blamed for several attacks on members of Australia's Indian community, including the burning of the Indian mission in Canberra, the kidnapping of the Indian military attache and his wife and attacks against Indian consulates and Air India offices.

The bomb was in a trash can outside the 43-story Hilton Hotel in downtown Sydney. It went off when the sanitation men dumped it into a garbage truck shortly before 1 a.m., about an hour after the delegates returned to the hotel from a harbor cruise.

Police said a man with a foreign accent warned them of the bomb by phone a few minutes before it exploded.

An Australian official who was in the lobby of the hotel when the bomb went off said one of the sanitation men "appeared to have been blown to bits."

An army bomb squad later detonated a second pack found in the area and thought to be a bomb. However, it turned out to be only a package of computer punch cards and readout skeets dumped by a nearby business office.

The Commonwealth meeting opened on schedule today under unusually tight security. Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser ordered an air services regiment from its base in western Australia to help guard the hotel. The New South Wales state government cancelled a reception in honor of the government leaders, and the conference security chief expressed concern for their safety on the 160-kilometre train trip they will take to a country hotel Tuesday.

The four-day regional conference is attended by the prime ministers or presidents of Australia, Bangladesh, Fiji, India, Malaysia, Nauru, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea, Singapore, Sri Lanka, Tonga and Western Samoa. It started with a closed-session discussion of world political and economic trends.

No French Seal Ban

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — France will not impose her import ban on seal pelts, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said Sunday.

Jamieson told a news conference after talks at the United Nations with French Foreign Minister Louis de Guiringaud that France has rescinded her decision on the import ban impose in protest against the annual seal hunt off the east coast of Canada.

"I'm glad to be able to say that the French are not going to impose their ban n the importation of sealskins," Jamieson said.

As a Newfoundlander, Jamieson said, it was "a good piece of news" for the region.

"I think, in fairness, it ought to be said that France was not a large importer," Jamieson added, but symbolically it was important.

In the last few weeks, the Newfoundland government officials have visited major cities in the United States and Canada.

No Easy Answers

About 70 British Columbians gathered at the University of Victoria last Friday for a one-day conference: Education and Employment of Youth. It was an attempt by UVic to encourage the sharing of information about the problem of the unemployed young and, it was hoped, to find some solutions.

The participants came from a wide range of backgrounds — government, the universities, the community colleges, business and industry, labor, student groups. They could and did provide information in abundance — reams of statistics detailing the dimensions of the problem, outlines of programs now being undertaken to try to reduce the youth unemployment rate, summaries of studies that have been undertaken in other parts of North America.

Equally abundant were theories concerning the root causes of the problem — and who might be able to solve it. Education authorities pointed their finger at government or business, spokesmen for industry blamed the education system or the unions, labor representatives condemned the economic policies of the provincial and federal governments, and so on around the circle.

But when it came to solutions, it was a different story. A search for answers quickly convinced participants that the problem could not be tackled in isolation from the most basic difficulties of our economic system — problems of inflation, growth, productivity, international markets.

Most of the concrete solutions proposed were ones that would only skim the surface of the problem. Education Minister Pat McGeer announced, for example, the creation by the government of a series of doctoral and post-doctoral fellowships to be available to students working in high technology areas that would be of benefit to B.C. industry.

The fellowships will go quite a way towards solving certain other B.C. problems — the brain drain of students in applied sciences from this province, for example, and the difficulty of many industries in finding and paying suitable highly-skilled technologists. But the few fellowships that will be awarded each year will make no noticeable dent in the 40,000 or more unemployed young people in B.C.

It is the same with the solution of "better counselling for high school students" that several discussion groups came up with. That will help a few students find their way into fields with good job opportunities, but it won't solve the fundamental problem — that there are thousands more young people looking for jobs than there are jobs.

Other solutions proposed were directed towards long term goals — the idea of creating more industries (and, hence, many more jobs) in the province, for example. In the end that would make a great impact on the problem, but it will do nothing to help the thousands now looking for work.

In the end, perhaps, the only answer the group found was that there are no easy answers. Students and young people may simply have to accept that for the next few years it is going to be very difficult indeed for them to get a job.

That is a fearfully discouraging message, but perhaps it is better that it be spelled out, rather than that students be allowed to build high expectations about their future, then find out the expectations are unlikely to be met.

Wrong Number

Nearly three months of combat between the British Columbia Telephone Co. and the Telecommunications Workers Union are near an end today. We're thankful this saga of missed connections, wrong numbers and stuffed-up pay phones is finally over.

It was a dispute where both union and company slugged it out toe to toe and, as usual, the public be damned. Right up to the last days, there were petty games-playing and manoeuvring — mostly by B.C. Tel management. This must be the first industrial relations dispute in a long time in which the company kicked and bucked as much as B.C. Tel did over the return to work of its employees. Would that the company had been as stubborn way back in November over the walkout of their employees!

We hope this does not presage a new era of labor-management relations in the province, where both sides take three months to haggle over substantive issues, then with contracts terms signed, sealed and approved by management and union leadership, nobody goes back to work for another two or three weeks.

Some Questions

The Times reports that employment minister Cullen wants parents to encourage their children to become blue collar workers instead of professionals.

Question: Is Bud Cullen encouraging his offspring to become blue collar workers?

The same issue of the Times (Feb. 3) reports Prime Minister Trudeau as saying that Canadians will have to lower their expectations.

Question: Should we try to emulate our MPs and aim at an indexed pension for life after six years on the job? — Joe Percival, 522 Trutch Street.

Discrimination

It appears Ald. Murray Glazier wants to bring discrimination back into Bill 31, as reported in the Times Feb. 2 and 3. As chairman of the city finance committee he presented a brief to the B.C. cabinet recommending that rental apartment blocks be removed from their present category with other types of living accommodation and that the present taxable assessed rate be increased from 15 per cent to 25 per cent.

It was my understanding that Bill 31 was introduced to correct the inequities, distortions and discrimination which had been built up in the old system, contrary to the principles of fairness. In 1974 the government decided that property tax assessments were in such a shambles it created the assessment authority of B.C. They have come up with actual values based on 1976 market sales which appear to be reasonably close in most cases.

Mr. Glazier would like to reverse this new system and return to discrimination. He points out that two similar buildings over the period 1977 to 1980 will change as follows:

128 Croft St. 38 suite rental building will decrease assessment 22.64 per cent.

118 Croft St. 38 suite condominium will increase in assessment 20.56 per cent.

This only indicates that the market value of these properties is greatly different and I present the following table of 1976 sales to prove that rental apartments have been paying far more than their share of taxes (actually 22.64 per cent by Mr. Glazier's calculation). Because his examples are in the low end of apartment and condominium price structure. I have also picked low cost houses as examples.

	No. of Sales	Date of sales	Average sale price	1976 Taxes average gross	Unit average net*
Houses	12	1976	$34,291	$371	$ 91
Condos at 118 Croft St.	9	1976	$27,955	$379	$ 99
Apart. Bldgs., James Bay	4	1975-7	$15,789	$379	$379

* Net taxes are after deducting the $280 home-owner grant.

This shows that a $34,000 house, a $28,000 condominium and a $15,750 rental apartment were paying about the same gross taxes which is rank discrimination against renters. Indirectly, as most of them do not qualify for any grants they are paying 282 per cent more net taxes than the above condos and 316 per cent more than the net taxes paid by the above houses. This is reduced in some cases by the SAFER grant.

Mr. Glazier (a Victoria homeowner) neglects to mention the homeowner grant or the market value of his examples. I hope he is more careful with our tax dollars. Additional discrimination against rental apartments is that no free garbage collection is supplied by the city.

Mr. Glazier says "actual value for apartments has been computed by an income approach rather than the market approach used for other residential categories." This is not true. They took an average market value and adjusted up or down for amenities and other factors. This seems the only fair and equitable way available.

Under Bill 31 houses, apartments, condos and mobile homes are assessed at 15 per cent of actual value, commercial at 25 per cent and industrial at 30 per cent. Mr. Glazier says the system works well except in the case of apartments which he would like taxed at the 25 per cent rate instead of 15 per cent as all other residential property.

Now Mr. Glazier would like to add a similar burden to rental apartments (and indirectly to the tenants) and perpetuate inequities. He is requesting a 66 per cent increase in apartment taxes over houses. This kind of discrimination greatly lessens the chance that any new apartment buildings will be built by the private sector to the detriment of the construction industry and people who are looking for rental accommodation in the future.

To think that property taxes come from the landlord is like thinking that government revenue comes from the government rather than taxpayers. Maybe 25,000 or 30,000 renters in the city will remember Mr. Glazier at the next election as well as the 10,731 single-family homeowners he is courting. — C. Warren, Secretary-Manager, Greater Victoria Apartment Owners' Association.

Nader Loses Control of Consumerism

WASHINGTON — Ralph Nader, the man who embodied American consumerism through four U.S. administrations and introduced "recalls" and "ripoffs" to the national vocabulary, is in a serious tailspin — a victim of changing public attitudes and his own stridency.

Ironically, his personal decline comes at a time when the occupant of the White House shares some of his fervor, and the octopus-like Nader organization seems solidly entrenched in Washington.

The Nader image has been suffering for some time, but the biggest blow came just this week when the House of Representatives killed a project he has been nurturing for eight years — a bill to set up a federal consumer agency.

The vote was a clear message from Congress to that body's most persistent gadfly in modern times: the Nader sting is gone.

Years ago, his frontal attacks on everything from unsafe automobiles to fatty frankfurters virtually guaranteed legislative action, by the sheer force of his research and energy. Time was when congressmen and even presidents quailed under his broadsides.

Negative Stuff

He was showered with kudos from all sides. A supreme court justice once called him "the single most effective antagonist of American history." The national press flocked to him with unquestioning devotion. The Washington consumer reporter of The New York Times, for example, once said: "I don't want to be associated with any negative stuff about Ralph Nader."

Consumer advocate Carole Tucker Foreman, now in the government, said that if she were to write a social history of the 1960s and '70s, "I'd write it in terms of Ralph Nader."

His ascetic lifestyle — living in a $80-a-month boarding house with a landlady who was afraid to raise his rent, eschewing cars, telephones and television sets — became the stuff of a modern folk legend.

So powerful was his sway over public opinion that a prospective candidate for the U.S. presidency, Sen. Birch Bayh, once considered clearing all his proposed cabinet appointments through him.

But the winds are now blowing in another direction. Last fall, a number of congressmen who had been targets of his high-decibel attacks gloated about the attention.

"Ralph Nader's attacks on me are a political plus," said Rep. Elliott Levitas, whom Nader had denounced personally for not supporting the consumer agency bill. Another Democrat sneered on the House floor: "It is with humble pride and a dash of satisfied curiosity that I hold the distinction of being the personal target of a Ralph Nader name-calling campaign."

White House aides working for the bill found themselves embarrassed by Nader's zeal, especially as it was directed at liberals who were uncertain about the legislation. He labelled them "mushy liberals."

One liberal Republican from California, Paul McCloskey, remembers Nader calling him "disgustingly repulsive and a double-crosser" for voting against an initial version of the bill. The consumer advocate was going so far as to venture into a politician's district, and denouncing him violently in front of his own supporters.

There was a marked tone of desperation to his strategy as all sides pointed to a defeat of the bill. Graciousness has never been part of Nader's style, but he was carrying his bluntness too far.

"Members resent being constantly kicked in the groin by Nader on issues that have two sides," says a congressional aide who lobbied for the bill.

Nader's colleagues in Washington privately doubt the wisdom of his stridency, but they say efforts to tone him down have been "totally frustrated."

"He has an enormous capacity for anger, the kind of anger that overrides everything," one associate said in a recent interview. "But he's always been self-righteous. His causes, to him, are a matter of life and death."

According to people close to him, Nader is becoming increasingly alarmed by a resurgence of "corporate robber baron" influence in congress — the kind that was so prevalent in Washington in the late 19th century.

Friend and foe alike have been exposed to his white heat. Last fall, Nader branded his old friend and colleague Joan Claybrook a traitor for supporting an administration decision that would delay the mandatory introduction of airbags in cars. Claybrook was one of several former associates of his who have gone into government.

Nader summarized his feelings at the time by saying: "If I lose a friend because of this, she's not a friend."

Another aspect to the decline of Naderism, as he typifies it, is a changing public mood toward social militancy. The administrations of Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon, and to a lesser degree, Gerald Ford, provided scores of reasons for the average American to inveigh against big government and its excesses.

Nader had a vast constituency when he criticized the secretive and insensitive bureaucracy, the callousness of the auto-makers, the airlines, the banks and all the "fat cats" who siphoned off tax money from the public trough.

Then came Jimmy Carter. Even before his inauguration, Carter made it clear that he himself intended to be the nation's number one consumer advocate, in effect stealing some of Nader's thunder.

Yet at the same time, Carter promised less government, less bureaucratic do-goodism. Washington, he said, had done enough meddling in the peoples' lives. It was within this apparent contradiction that the consumer agency bill, which would create more government, was trapped. And Nader with it.

A third factor has prevailed about Nader in recent years: his own success.

When Ralph Nader was first elevated to national prominence in 1966, courtesy of General Motors which apologized for putting private detectives on his trail, he was a loner — a young Connecticut lawyer with fire in his belly and a host of selfless causes.

But since then, he has become his own conglomerate. With private contributions that now exceed $1 million a year, he has branched out into a cluster of groups that employ dozens of people.

He has an energy project called Critical Mass. He has a litigation group that specializes in public interest lawsuits. He has a group that lobbies for changes in the tax structure. He has a health research group. He has set up an aviation consumer action project.

He employs six people who do nothing but lobby in congress, called Congress Watch. From his public speaking fees, (he commands $3,500 a speech), he finances another group called Corporate Accountability.

He has a weekly column that appears in 70 newspapers, and his staffers churn out a blizzard of press releases on everything from conflict of interest in government to the Soviet satellite that dropped on Canadian territory.

Muck Rakes

"The consumer movement," says Carole Foreman, "has grown larger than Ralph."

With consumerism thus institutionalized, more and more people can criticize Nader personally without seeming to denigrate the movement.

Nader's own personality quirks are also open to question.

Last year, he hosted the satirical television show Saturday Night Live in which the Nader sketches, though intended as humor, were a little too true to life to be seen as satire.

He was again widely lambasted for frivolousness when he set up a group last year called FANS, with a mandate to fight for the rights of sports fans, the quality of their hot dogs, and the ticket prices they had to pay.

And while seeming to be a champion of public disclosure and "sunshine" laws, Nader has steadfastly refused to open his own books and reveal how his money is spent.

But all of these factors pale beside his biggest problem: a refusal to compromise that borders on the fanatical.

As Theodore Roosevelt once said: "The men with the muck rakes are often indispensable to the well-being of society, but only if they know when to stop raking the muck."

Find a Way

The strike-lockout of telephone workers and the continued unrest among postal workers, plus the fact of our lamentable record of time lost through labor disputes, should convince the Canadian public that there is something drastically wrong with our present method of solving labor-management disputes.

Surely, in a society capable of putting satellites in orbit, it would be possible to find a more rational way to deal with the problems of labor-management relations.

The theory that the needs and wants of labor and capital are of necessity always diametrically opposed has been proven to be as dead as the dodo. As long as all our attempts at correcting the antagonism between these vital elements in our economy are predicated on this fallacy there is absolutely no hope for creating in Canada the much heralded new society.

The day that a small group of railway workers can tie up the whole transportation structure of B.C. is long past (if indeed it ever existed). And the day that a small group of workers can tie up the compulsory car insurance scheme should be past! Our society simply cannot afford such luxury. Far from being social democracy, that is social anarchy. And lest you interpret this as an indictment of organized labor — neither can we afford to see the rape of our natural resources by corporate capital and see the profits invested in other countries and then on the pretext of competitive position see these investments used as a club to extract still further concessions from our society.

We claim to be a Christian nation. Let us then see the ethics based on the concept of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man applied to our socioeconomic structure. — Eric Faure, 1253 Hastings Street.

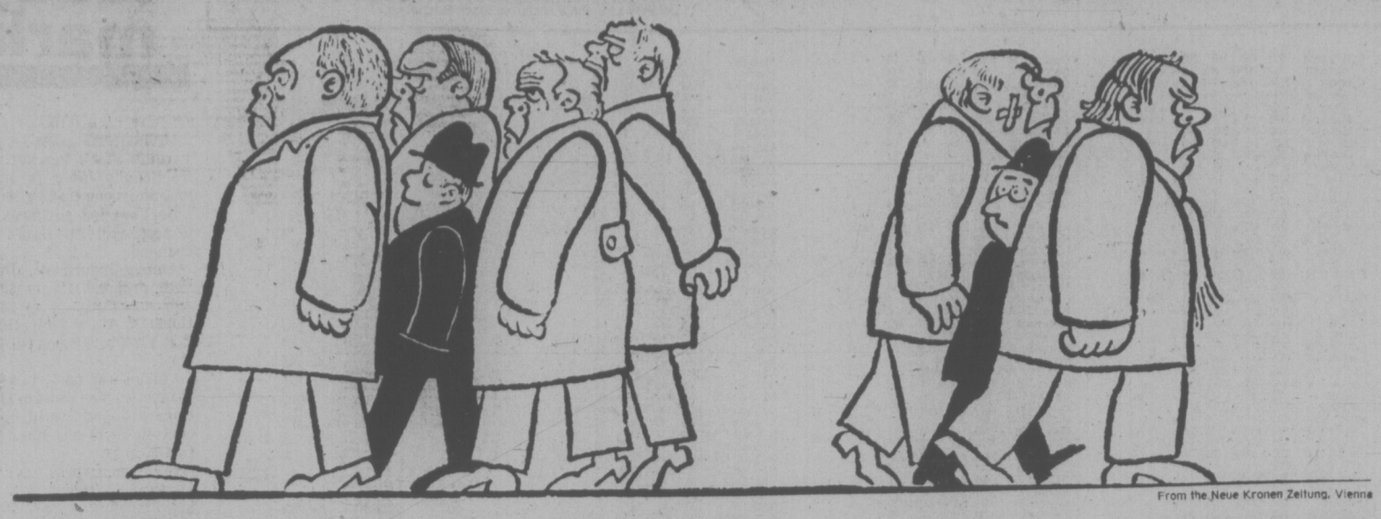
Bodyguards for Businessmen a Big New Industry

By PAUL HOFMANN



From the Neue Kronen Zeitung, Vienna

COLOGNE — Europe has a new and ominous growth industry in the wake of terrorist outrages — protecting the businessman. Executives in West Germany joined the targets of ideological violence when Jurgen Ponto, chairman of the Dresdner Bank, was slain by extremists at his home near Frankfurt last July. Then the top spokesman for West German industry, Hanns-Martin Schleyer, was ambushed here in September and later killed.

Alarm turned to panic. Directors throughout Germany began authorizing corporate funds and manpower for security — to the benefit of companies that supply platoons of bodyguards and other protection from internationally linked terrorists who kidnap and murder business leaders and hijack aircraft to raise money or enforce other demands.

Terrorism, from Argentina to Japan, is now seen as a grave threat to business. The United States Air Force has gathered chilling statistics. From Jan. 1, 1970, to Nov. 1, 1977, it recorded 1,800 episodes of terrorism, excluding activities in Northern Ireland, Israel and the United States. They included 512 killings, 551 assaults and 363 kidnappings. Of the attempted kidnappings, 80 per cent of which were successful, 43 per cent of the victims were businessmen. Baron Edouard-Jean Empain, managing director of the Empain-Schneider conglomerate, was abducted by masked gunmen in Paris last month.

Following Schleyer's abduction on Sept. 5, a Lufthansa jet with 82 passengers and five crew members was hijacked on Oct. 13 en route from Majorca to Frankfurt. The four Arabic-speaking hijackers demanded the release of 13 imprisoned terrorists and a $15 million ransom. They killed the pilot and threatened to kill passengers and to have Schleyer killed. A West German commando unit in Somalia rescued the passengers, killing three hijackers and wounding the fourth. Then three of the 11 terrorists whose release had been sought committed suicide, according to officials, in a Stuttgart prison, and Schleyer's body was found in an abandoned car.

By late fall virtually every participant in gatherings of German banking and industrial executives was accompanied by at least one bodyguard. They wait outside the meeting rooms, eyeing one another coldly. Round-the-clock protection for one person requires four men and may cost up to $120,000 a year. In West Germany alone, at least 1,000 business executives are believed to be accorded such 24-hour service. Many wives and children are also protected.

Here in Cologne, as in Frankfurt, Dusseldorf, Hamburg, Paris, Nice and Milan, a person's importance is often apparent from the number of burly men surrounding him — as in the Renaissance, when a personage had a train of dagger-carrying retainers.

During the last few months, West Germany's 400 or so licensed security companies have hired thousands for guard duty. The companies' revenues in 1977 were estimated to have exceeded $1 billion. Armed escorts represent only one expense for business and industry in the European countries where terrorism has struck — West Germany, Italy and to a lesser degree France, the Netherlands, Austria and Switzerland.

Armor-plated cars with bullet-proof glass may cost $25,000 apiece. Bank branches have been equipped with closed-circuit TV and other electronics devices. Corporate headquarters have been remodeled as modern fortresses with advanced alarm systems, self-locking doors and hidden executive escape hatches.

Lufthansa, the West German airline, has been particularly troubled by terrorist threats. It is one of the few profitable European carriers, but its stock slumped several points when messages purporting to come from the Red Army Faction, also known as the Baader-Meinhof Gang, threatened to blow up Lufthansa planes in the air on or after Nov. 15. The airline lost business although it adopted some of the most stringent security procedures in civil aviation. No planes were blown up.

Other European carriers and airports have also raised security standards. New personnel were hired and trained, new equipment installed, and flight operations changed. Britain, Switzerland and West Germany are considering making passengers pay special security fees to recover the cost of the new anti-terrorism measures, and ultimately the consumer will pay all the overhead for the increased security, although costs are difficult to quantify.

Sophisticated guesses put the cost of preventing terrorism at hundreds of millions of dollars in West Germany alone in 1977. Even for a $550 billion economy like West Germany's, that is a stunning price for protection from — at most — a few hundred terrorists. Fugitive hard-core terrorists number no more than 50. Rarely have so few lawbreakers cost so much.

Secretaries Fight Back

By MYRA MACPHERSON
Washington Post

In Boston, last year's winner of the Petty Office Procedure contest was a secretary who was required to sew a rip in her boss' pants — while he was wearing them.

Runner-up was a secretary who had to dress up as a bumble bee — her company's symbol — and hand out advertising literature on street corners.

All across the country there are other bosses with equally winning ways — an executive who made his secretary shoot "before" and "after" pictures when he shaved off his moustache, another who asked his secretary to put mayonnaise on his plants because he had heard that made them grow better, another who fired his office worker when she refused to return to a cafeteria in the pouring rain to exchange a corned beef sandwich on white for one on rye. Another demanded that his secretary keep him supplied with carrots while he dieted.

Rebelling against such unfair work conditions and practices — many of which are written into job descriptions — 3,000 women office workers have formed organizations in more than a dozen American cities, including Boston, Cleveland, Chicago, Dayton, New York, San Francisco and Detroit.

Most examples of inequities involve male bosses and female office workers — which, in general, reflects North America's corporate make-up. Organization members estimate 90 per cent of U.S. office workers are female. Some interviewed said they preferred to work for the relatively few women bosses. "Women have more understanding," says Elizabeth Schneider.

Schneider is one of five women in the Washington area — with its thousands of federal employees and law office personnel — who have just begun to join the fight. They have formed 60 Words Per Minute, a group so new that they have not started a membership drive, have not had fund-raisers and are vague about what to do with members once they get them.

No more dressing up as a bumble bee to please the boss

"Our goal is to help office workers become articulate and to find positive strategy to correct their problems," says Carole MacGaffin, who gives no examples of "positive strategy."

The group has one staff member, Schneider, whom Vista pays $3,000 annually to organize the women. Schneider recalls one of her previous jobs. "I had to get lunch for my boss' meetings — contact seven people from seven different offices and find out what they wanted to eat, order it, pick it up. It just seemed a waste of my time to order ham-on-rye and hold the mustard and all of that when I had so many other things to do."

Women in groups across the U.S. are bolstered by each other's experiences and by the fact they are not alone.

One of the most effective is Boston's five-year-old 9 to 5 — 500 women turned into Ralph Naders in their zeal to upgrade office workers' jobs.

With an annual budget of $160,000 — from dues and fund-raisers such as bake sales — they pressure companies to write up job descriptions, define firing policies. The women monitor affirmative action, file complaints against and pressure the government to investigate companies with federal contracts who do not comply with affirmative action, and hold Petty Office Procedure contests to dramatize the plight of office workers.

One 9 to 5 founder, Ellen Cassedy, was an office worker at Harvard University until the day her boss came out and told her it was her job to take the calendar off the wall — the calendar on his door. Another, Judy McCullough, after working part-time for an insurance company for more than three years, went full-time only to find that none of her past experience counted for accrued sick leave.

"We find that women repeatedly call with similar examples: They are asked to do personal chores, they are victims of the Friday Afternoon Firing. The boss calls them in 10 minutes before closing on a Friday and tells them not to come in on Monday. There is no warning and unless they can prove discriminaton because of sex, age or race, it is very difficult to have any recourse," says McCullough.

The Boston officer worker who was fired for not getting corned-beef-on-rye worked for a lawyer. 9 to 5 picketed the office and passed out leaflets, was written up in the local newspaper and filed a charge with the Massachusetts Bar Association board of overseers, who investigate unethical behavior of employers.

"They never had a case like this before. They refused to investigate. It is tough when all the women are secretaries and all the men are lawyers," says McCullough.

The Downfall of a Cocky Kid

By SCOTT YOUNG
The Globe and Mail

The worst thing happening to Derek Sanderson right now must be that people are feeling sorry for him. That isn't the way he ever planned it. The whole thrust — conscious or not — of the cocky kid who went to Boston 10 years ago for a peanuts contract was to make people envious of him, not sorry.

Maybe it's an exaggeration to say that everybody is sorry for him. Certainly the people who put up the money for his profligate lifestyle, expecting an honest effort in return and not receiving it, must feel that his subsequent personal disasters were exactly what he had coming to him. Nobody is going to buy the argument that maybe the way the owners threw money around a few years ago did more than anything else to ruin him. And yet . . .

When he signed first for a contract that provided $10,000 the first year, $12,000 for the second and $13,000 for the third, he had to scramble, claw, skate, gasp his way to the bench worn out from superlative effort, to prove that he was worth a lot more.

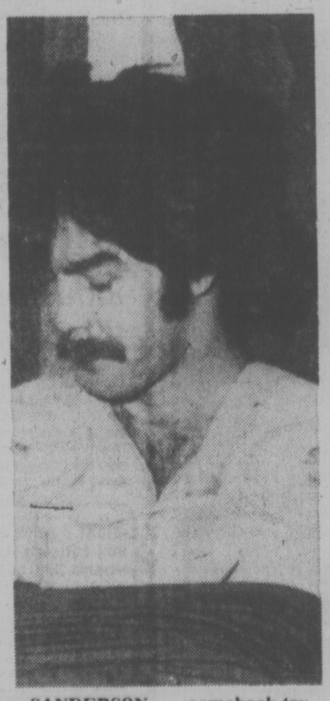
He did prove it. Remember the way he would hang in Montreal's end forechecking, breaking up play after play, in the Stanley Cup playoffs of 1968 and 1969. He won everybody's respect. Any club in the league would have loved to have him. That was Sanderson the hockey player, before he became Sanderson the playboy and kicked it all away.

Now as he skates by himself in Detroit, trying to get himself ready to work out with Detroit Red Wings, no one knows what goes through his head. Some of it must be remorse and regret. He is by no means an insensitive man, and must know that the odds against him now were compiled in mornings when he drank until 6 a.m. and reached for the bottle again when he woke. But he would be less than human if he didn't sometimes think of the days when people talking of the Boston Bruins spoke of Bobby Orr and Derek Sanderson and Phil Esposito almost in the same breath: the strengths of the team. Those were the days when he'd stride into a dressing-room as one of the kings.



SANDERSON . . . comeback try

Now he knows that when he walks into the Detroit dressing-room, providing he can get himself ready enough on his own for even that chance at a real tryout, he comes as a supplicant. There will be none of the easy camaradarie of equals. He has come hat in hand, down and all but out, asking for a chance. Every eye will be on him in the workouts — more so, and more critically, if he ever gets into a game. Off the ice they'll be watching to see if he really can nurse one beer all night, turning down refills. On the ice they'll want to see if he has the stamina and can summon up the on-ice discipline he once had, but left behind. Whether he has it in him to overcome all that, no one yet knows.

I wonder if ever he reflects on the examples that he must have known about, but ignored. He must have known that Bo Belinsky had been a good pitcher before he became more famous for pitching to Mamie Van Doren than to hitters. He'd undoubtedly have heard of Real Chevrefils, who scored 31 goals one season for Boston before his premature decline due to hard living. He'd know of Howie Young, who kept getting second chances. Maybe he would even have heard of the rocky later years of Knobby Warwick, once a rookie award winner like Sanderson. It isn't the company he had in mind when he was riding high. But it is the company the public puts him in now.

He must know that it is all up to him. That is sometimes the most difficult situation a man can face. If he makes it, a lot of us will feel the relief that comes with a last-minute save. If he doesn't, few of us will ever hear of him again. Except when oldtimers are talking and someone says, "Remember Sanderson, when he first broke in . . ."

Subordinating Ideas

By KAREN OGDEN

If, as I suggested in my first column, you are carefully observing the world around you, you are facing complexities everywhere. For the most part giant corporations have replaced small, neighborhood businesses. Four, six, and eight lane superhighways have replaced two-lane roads. Sprawling urban areas have mushroomed on the sites of smaller settlements. In war, highly complex weapons have replaced the simple guns and cannons of an earlier time. Computers do much of the "thinking" once done by man.

Much as we may regret the passage of a simpler way of life, we must deal with the complex world in which we live. And in dealing with it, we must reflect in our language the complications in our lives. We can do so by using complex sentences.

A complex sentence is one which contains at least one independent clause and one dependent, or subordinate, one. A subordinate clause, like an independent one, has a subject and a verb, but unlike an independent one, it does not express a complete thought. For example, in the first sentence of this column both the clauses "If you are carefully observing the world around you," and "as I suggested in my first column," include a subject and a verb (italicized here), but neither is complete in itself. Like a phrase, a subordinate clause acts as a single part of speech — as a noun or an adjective or an adverb. It also expresses an idea subordinate to the idea in the independent clause. When you use subordinate clauses, you show the connection between ideas that are of unequal but related importance.

"That life is worth living is the most necessary of assumptions, and, were it not assumed, the most impossible of conclusions," wrote George Santayana. That life is worth-living is the subject of the sentence. It has a subject, life, and a verb, is; but by itself it is not complete. It is therefore a subordinate clause, and because it is the subject of the sentence, it is a clause used as a noun.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle tells us that "It is a great thing to start life with a small number of books which are your very own." In this sentence which are your very own is a subordinate clause used as an adjective. The clause describes the books; it tells which books are under discussion. In this clause which, standing for books, is the subject, and are is the verb. Adjective clauses usually begin with a relative pronoun — who, whose, whom, which, or that. In this sentence we can see that the more important idea is that "it is a great thing to start life with a small number of books." The fact that those books are your own is subordinate to the main idea, and the structure of the sentence shows that subordination.

Adverbial clauses, like simple adverbs, modify verbs, adjectives, or adverbs. They are connected to the rest of the sentence by a subordinating conjunction, a word like after, because, before, if, since, for, when, or while, and the conjunction shows the nature of the relationship between the ideas in the subordinate and main clauses. Let us examine several complex sentences with adverbial clauses and see exactly how those clauses are related to the main clauses.

Many complex sentences indicate the time of the adverbial clause in relation to the time of the main clause. For example, if we say, "I will come before the rehearsal is over, we indicate that the action in the main clause precedes the action in the subordinate clause. However, the sentence, "I will come after the rehearsal is over," reverses the situation; here the action in the subordinate clause comes first.

Sometimes the actions are concurrent as in William Hazlitt's comment that "As we adavnce in life, we acquire a keener sense of the value of time." Here the word as means "at the same time as." George Bernard Shaw tells us that "when two people are under the influence of the most violent, most insane, most delusive, and most transient of passions, they are required to swear that they will remain in that excited, abnormal, and exhausting condition continuously until death do them part." Here when like the as in Hazlitt's sentence means "at the same time as," but there is a subtle difference. In Hazlitt's sentence as signifies a progression in time, whereas in Shaw's sentence when signifies a specific moment, that of the marriage ceremony. If we substituted when for as or as for when in these two sentences, they would not have the precision they now do.

Sometimes complex sentences deal with the reasons why things happen. Looking at another sentence from Shaw, we learn that "Marriage is popular because it combines the maximum of temptation with the maximum of opportunity." Here the subordinate clause explains why, from the point of view of the speaker, the statement of the main clause is true. In the Bible, in Matthew, we are told who the blessed are, and why they are blessed — "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy."

Some complex sentences show under what conditions the action of the main clause takes place. At the beginning of Shakespeare's Twelfth Night the Duke Orsino says, "If music be the food of love, play on." The implication is that under other circumstances, if music were not the food of love, Orsino would not instruct his musicians to "play on."

We have examined some of the ways in which subordinate clauses are related to main clauses. Sometimes, however, writers are injudicious in their choice of subordinating conjunctions, and then the clauses do not show their proper relationship. If we say that "While a good education is very important, it is not everything" we mean "Although a good education . . . ," and that is what we should say. We are not being precise if we say, "I read in the Times where Parliament has resumed," when we mean, "I read in the Times that Parliament has resumed."

As well as choosing the exact conjunction that we want, we must remember that the subordinate ideas must be in subordinate clauses. If they are in a main clause, we show that we do not understand the relative importance of our ideas. For example, in the sentence "I was crossing the street when I was hit by a car," the main idea is clearly that I was hit by a car; therefore that idea should be in the main clause. Saying "When I crossed the street I was hit by a car" puts the ideas in the proper relationship.

Another fault in writing is not subordinating when the material clearly calls for doing so: "She divorced me two years ago. I have been very depressed."

Here are two sentences which are related in thought. Because they are both simple sentences, they receive equal emphasis, but they are not equally important. The sensitive writer will combine them to show their relative importance as well as their connection. He may say, "I have been very depressed since she divorced me two years ago."

Once we have subordinated ideas properly, we need to decide where in the sentence we should put the subordinate clauses. Readers of Emily Dickinson will notice how frequently she begins her poems with subordinate clauses — "Because I could not stop for Death," "If I should die," "As Sleigh Bells seem in summer," "When I hoped." Placing the subordinate clause at the beginning of the sentence sets up expectations in the reader which the main clause satisfies. The reader feels impelled to move on, to find the answer. The writer has captured his reader's attention at the outset. Furthermore, the end of the sentence is more emphatic than the beginning, so having the main clause at the end gives the sentence a strong ending. Sometimes, however, we may feel that the sentence sounds better if the main clause comes first. Variation is the best answer to the question of placement, because the varied style is most apt to hold the attention of the reader.

Richard Sheridan, the eighteenth-century playwright, said that "You write with ease to show your breeding, / But easy writing's curst hard reading." Easy writing is hard reading because it fails to show any relationship between ideas, and leaves all the connecting up to the reader. Therefore, if you wish to show your reader that you see the relative value of ideas and the nature of the connection between then, you will make good use of complex sentences.

OIL GUESS UP

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The Washington Post reports that the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) has revised upward its estimate of Saudi Arabia's potential oil production.

Last month the CIA dropped its estimate of daily Saudi production to 8.8 million barrels from 10.5 million barrels.

A classified report attributed the drop to political and economic decisions by the kingdom's rulers as well as alleged mismanagement of the fields by the Arabian American Oil Co. (Aramco), the newspaper says.

But the estimate of reduced potential output by the world's largest oil exporter was received sceptically by U.S. government and oil industry experts.

Under pressure from the experts, the CIA now has altered the figures in its International Energy Biweekly Statistical Review to the original estimate of 10.5 million barrels a day, the Washington Post says.

U.S. Coal Piles Shrink As Strike Stretches On

WASHINGTON (AP) — Utility company officials throughout the eastern United States and the U.S. Midwest are helplessly watching meager coal piles shrink as prospects grow that the miners strike may stretch into March.

Miner opposition to a proposed settlement has been growing steadily since the pact was tentatively agreed to last Monday by United Mine Workers negotiators and officials from the Bituminous Coal Operators Association.

Friday, the union bargaining council unofficially voted 33-3 against sending the agreement to the union membership for a ratification vote.

The vote was not binding because UMW President Arnold Miller was not present, but it was taken among council members to send Miller a signal that his efforts at the bargaining table were unsatisfactory, they said.

The most controversial provisions of the disputed tentative contract include a financial penalty for chronically absent miners and those who participate in wildcat strikes. Among other things, the agreement would raise the average $7.80 hourly wage by $2.35 over three years.

Miller had called the bargaining council together Friday to discuss the contract, but postponed the session before noon and went into seclusion after an estimated 500 miners swarmed through UMW headquarters protesting the proposed contract and Miller's efforts.

With ratification of the existing tentative pact now unlikely, more negotiations, as yet unscheduled, will be needed. There is no way to tell how long they will last, but once negotiators reach a compromise acceptable to the bargaining committee, ratification by the membership would take at least 10 days.

Meanwhile, top Carter administration officials held an unannounced meeting to talk about "the very serious problems we're facing with the coal situation," said Rex Granum, Carter's deputy press secretary.

Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall and Attorney-General Griffin Bell were reported to have discussed "a number of options" for dealing with the strike which threatens to cripple industry and chill homes in many states.

But Granum said that ordering the miners back to work for an 80-day cooling off period under the Taft-Hartley Act was not among those options.

Indiana Governor Otis Bowen requested that Carter invoke the Taft-Hartley Act in a telegram that read:

"The lights are dimming throughout Indiana. Economic hardship and human misery will occur as the state recedes into darkness. . . . You must order the resumption of coal production and transportation."

Senators John Glenn and Howard Metzenbaum, both Ohio Democrats, said the White House will announce today a measure that would exempt coal-burning industries and utilities from federal air pollution regulations. Such a move would result in more efficient use of the shrinking stockpiles.

Coal stockpiles at utilities are growing dangerously low, with one Ohio company reporting only a 28-day supply remaining. Many utilities in that state have already resorted to small voltage reductions, unnoticeable to the average consumer.

Alternating two-hour blackouts of residential customers lie in the future for many electric companies if the strike continues, officials said. Some businesses in West Virginia have cut their work week to four days.

U.S. TYCOONS GLUM

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. business executives have less confidence in their country's economic prospects than do executives in eight other industrialized countries, said a McGraw-Hill survey released Sunday.

Businessmen in Canada, Britain, West Germany, Italy, France, Spain, Japan, and the Netherlands were more optimistic about their countries' and companies' economic outlook than U.S. executives, McGraw-Hill said.

Even less optimistic than U.S. businessmen, however, were Belgian executives.

The survey, taken at the end of 1977, asked executives from 100 firms in 10 countries about their short-term and long-term sales outlook, inflation, national economic prospects and labor relations. Thirty percent of the firms replied.

Norway Devalues Its Currency

OSLO (Reuter) — Norway devalued its currency by eight per cent Friday in a move to counter economic setbacks and aid market access for Norwegian goods.

The move was agreed at a meeting in Denmark of the joint European currency float which links Norwegian, Danish, West German, Dutch, Belgian and Luxembourg currencies.

But West German Finance Minister Hans Apel made clear in a statement later that Norway's float partners are not entirely happy with the move and hinted that Oslo had wanted an even larger devaluation.

News of the devaluation put the Norwegian crown value down by five per cent against the U.S. dollar—to 5.4054 from 5.1427—on the New York foreign exchange market.

Dealers in Frankfurt said the devaluation would probably curb short-term strains in Norway's monetary system but might pose a threat to long-term stability.

Fire Code Urged for B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tim Lenahan, a professional engineer whose specialty is fire protection, says use of wood frame in construction is a major factor in fires in British Columbia.

"You only have to take a look at the wood frame schools built here in the early 50s and through the middle 60s to realize that construction is obviously the main cause of fires," he said in an interview Friday.

Even today new construction often does not measure up to building code standards, said Lenahan.

"Those standards are fire-oriented," he said. "Yet many new structures do not comply with the code simply because of ignorance on the part of builders of safety measures such as flame-spread ratings, and fire resistance and fire protection ratings."

In a letter Friday to Attorney-General Garde Gardom, the B.C. Association of Professional Engineers pressed Gardom for early legislation to extend the national fire code, or parts of it, as a fire code for B.C.

"This is a critical situation because the province's record in the area of property damage and death from fire has been, and is, the worst in the country," the letter said.

In 1974, according to the report of the Dominion Fire Commissioner, B.C. had the worst property loss record—at $26.24 per capita—of any of the 10 provinces.

The B.C. fire marshal's office reports that to November 1977 last year's figures show 6,308 fires, with property loss of $71.7 million, injury to 330 persons and death to 90. When the figures for 1977 are complete, the fire marshal's office estimates the per capita cost at $31.43.

"B.C. has never adopted the National Fire Code," Lenahan said. "The Fire Code is a natural supplement to the National Building Code which B.C. adopted only two years ago."

The high fire loss of school buildings, some of them set by youthful arsonists, illustrates the need for more substantial construction in public buildings here, he said.

"I don't think our kids are that much different from those in other parts of Canada. It's just that schools in other provinces are better built."

"There are many reasons for B.C.'s poor fire record," Lenahan said. "Among them are inadequate water supplies, lack of fire fighting equipment and improperly trained personnel."

He said many commonly-used interior finishes have high fire- spread ratings. Among them are cork, untreated Douglas Fir plywood, dressed wood, untreated particle board, Red Oak, cedar, fibreboard and foamed plastic.

Cedar's rating is so high it is not even listed with the Underwriters Laboratories of Canada.

"Presumably cedar has not been tested because there is as yet no completely effective way to treat it for fire resistance," said Lenahan.

Cedar is a popular finishing material, in both shingle and panel form, because of its aged and rough look.

Writer Fined $300

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia Supreme Court judge has endorsed the liberty of the press to criticise judges and juries for improper conduct, but warned that abusive criticism could constitute contempt of court

Justice R. P. Anderson made the comment Friday as he fined Southam Press Ltd. $500 and Jan-Udo Wenzel, a reporter for the Prince George Citizen, $300 for publishing an article on the justice system that the judge termed "outrageous trash."

In a Jan. 13 column in The Citizen, Wenzel criticised the dismissal of one of 12 jurors trying a first-degree murder case in the B.C. Supreme Court at Prince George.

Justice Anderson, who presided at the murder trial, discharged the juror after it was learned that his wife, who was employed by the Prince George RCMP detachment, might have read files relating to the case.

Justice Anderson said Friday the article was "insulting and contemptuous" because it was calculated to bring the courts and the administration of justice into disrepute.

"The liberty to write and speak freely on any subject is one of our most cherished rights," said the judge.

Gaps Seen in Space Treaty

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The USSR, to be liable for the costs of recovering the wreckage, under provisions of the international treaty must ask for the return of the debris scattered around the Northwest Territories by the fiery disintegration of its Satellite Cosmos 954.

This point and others in the international outer space agreement for the return of objects launched into space, are major gaps that require new negotiations and the rewriting of the treaty according to Allan B. McKinnon, official opposition defence critic. The MP for Victoria has made a study of the treaty and its ramifications since the satellite plunged to earth.

External affairs department officials agree that there are several "grey areas" in the treaty that require clarification.

In the Commons last week McKinnon cautioned External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson that the USSR could look at the bits of junk Canada and the Americans have recofered in the NWT and decide they are worthless because it is now obvious the core of the nuclear reactor has not been found. The Russians if they take that position could leave Canada stuck with meeting the entire cost of the search and recovery operations.

There is no doubt that the Canadian government's expulsion of 13 Soviet nationals from this country for espionage activities will complicate our negotiations with Russia for compensation.

Jamieson and Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda agreed at their recent meeting in Tokyo that an international conference should discuss problems of space flight security. Jamieson said he and Fukuda had spoken about an international conference that should debate how "difficult and unsolved questions" presenting a problem for the world should be treated. Japan is considering bringing the security questions before a UN committee for the peaceful use of nuclear energy.

Already the costs of searching for the pieces of the satellite, some of them highly radioactive, and recovering them is running well in excess of $5,000,000. The United States government has co-operated with the Canadian government in locating the widely scattered pieces of the satellite.

One of the first formal steps required under the treaty is Canada must formally notify the USSR as the launching nation, that one of its satellites has rocketed to earth in Canadian territory.

Jamieson revealed last week that Canada has now taken that formal step. He tabled in the Commons two diplomatic notes. One addressed to the embassy of the USSR and the other to the secretary general of the United Nations concerning the reentry of the Soviet satellite into the earth's atmosphere in Canada on Jan. 24.

Canada was fulfilling its obligation of notifying Russia and the UN that it had discovered parts of a space object on its territory. Canada said to Russia that they were "believed to be component parts of the USSR satellite." It also said some had been found to be radioactive. The radioactive parts are being removed to a safe location as local conditions permit.

There are three major gaps in the system of international treaties governing outer space, which have been shown up, since the Russian satellite plummeted to earth McKinnon said.

First the Soviet Union cooperated with Canada and earlier with the United States only after the Russians were requested to do so. Secondly the Soviet Union acted on a bilateral basis in the affair apparently making no contacts with international organizations.

As a result only those countries which the U.S. or the Soviet Union chose to inform, had advance warning that a satellite was orbiting out of control and could plunge to earth. American space scientists have voiced the fear that if the satellite had failed one pass later in its decaying orbit it could have plunged toward earth near New York city at the height of the rush hour.

Repressive Pen Charges Denied

MONTREAL (CP) — A spokesman for the Canadian Penitentiary Service has denied charges that conditions in the maximum-security Archambault Institute were repressive under warden Michel Roy, who was shot to death last week outside his home.

"I don't think the situation was bad," said Claude Tessier, director of public affairs, in an interview on radio station CFCF Sunday.

He said Roy was only trying to increase security at the prison following several murders among the prisoners and some "massive" escape attempts.

Paul Rose, jailed for the 1970 kidnapping and murder of Quebec labor minister Pierre Laporte, said in a letter published the day before Roy's death that a conflict at Archambault had become "serious."

Earlier the Quebec Human Rights League had said conditions in the prison were "deplorable" and that prisoners were living under a "repressive" system which included the indiscriminate use of tear gas to quell minor disturbances.

Tessier acknowledged that Roy had reduced some of the prisoners' privileges after being appointed warden last September, but this had been done so that surveillance in the prison could be improved in the wake of increasing unrest.

"Archambault is not an easy place to run," said Tessier. "Most of the prisoners are hard-core criminals who are not interested in changing their behavior."

He said prisoners had reacted to the new restrictions by presenting administrators with a "fantastic list of unrealistic demands." He said some members of the prisoners' committee that prepared the demands were just trying "to create problems."

Rose said in his letter that he and several fellow members of the 15-man committe had been moved to the segregation block at Laval Institute, another maximum-security institution nearby.

He said prisoners had not accepted that their committee is only a sounding board and not a decision-making body. But Tessier argued that many prisoners had shown they did not agree with the committee.

Describing Roy as "one of the best directors in the penitentiary service," Tessier said the warden was trying to improve communications with the prisoners. He described Roy's slaying as a "despair reaction."

The 38-year-old Roy was shot by three gunmen last Tuesday as he was clearing snow from the drive-way of his east-end home.

Tessier said he hoped the killing would draw public attention to the difficulties of running a maximum-security institute. He added that conditions at Archambault "certainly can be improved," but prisoners "don't change their behavior overnight."

GRITS SPLIT ON ROOF

JONQUIERE, Que. (CP) — Claude Ryan and Raymond Garneau, the two candidates for the leadership of the Quebec Liberal party, came down on opposite sides of the fence Sunday on the issue of whether or not to complete the roof on Montreal's Olympic stadium.

Garneau favored immediate completion of the mast and retractable roof—which could not be finished in time for the 1976 Summer Games.

Ryan, who said he had not had time to fully study the problem of the mast and roof, told party faithful the estimated cost of $100 million "represents too much money, and for so little."

Last week, the Quebec government said it was ready to build the mast and install the roof once it could find enough money without taking anything away from its social programs. But no work will start for at least a year.

Que. 'Can't Duck Debt'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The rest of Canada could not be expected to take over Quebec's $41-billion federal debt if that province should decide to separate, J. V. Clyne, former chairman of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., said Saturday.

Speaking at the Vancouver Institute, Clyne said that if Quebec repudiated its share of the nation's debt, its credit would be destroyed internationally at a time when vast amounts are needed from the foreign money market.

"Apart altogether from any question of honesty or morality, Quebec would have to accept her share of federal debt to protect her own financial credibility," said Clyne.

Clyne also said that prior to Confederation, control of the St. Lawrence and its commerce led to bitter disputes between Upper and Lower Canada which would be revived if Quebec separates.

Chain Trick Truly Chilling

Ready to take the plunge

OTTAWA (CP) — Eric Sloan, a 20-year-old Algonquin College marketing student did something few other people can — or would want to — do.

The enthusiastic amateur magician went under the ice of Dow's Lake in the heart of Ottawa bound with chains and padlocks and with a 20-pound iron weight on his feet and escaped in 44 seconds.

With hundreds of entranced witnesses watching breathlessly in 15 below zero temperature the slender young man, clad only in rubberized shorts, the head-gear off a skin diver's wet suit and a pair of goggles, was lifted into the chill water through a hole cut in the lake ice.

With dozens of Rideau Canal skaters gliding by only a few yards away, he shortly burst back into the bright sunlight, a victorious grin on his face.

Ordinarily his interest is in card tricks, but he also has been interested in escape and last year unshackled himself while hanging over a concrete floor.

Still, as was Harry Houdini before him, Sloan has always been obsessed with the idea of escaping under water.

"Cold water's too painful for most magicians to overcome the discomfort or to succeed unless you're in top shape and have the right control and attitude," Sloan said before going into the water Sunday.

How did he do it? He wouldn't say.

How-To Class for Widows

Elizabeth Rogers says one of the biggest problems widows face is a lack of self-confidence.

"They have a very hard time thinking of themselves as individuals," said the 60-year-old founder of the Widows' Information Centre at 620 View.

The centre, in co-operation with Prime Time, a federally-funded project set up to help women in their middle years, will help widows get over that problem as well as deal with other hurdles in their path with a seven-week course beginning Feb. 28.

The Tuesday evening sessions will look at such problems as health and nutrition, financial planning, legal problems, how to handle grief, relationships and community resources.

On the first subject, Rogers said it is a medical fact that during times of stress, a person's white blood count goes down, meaning one is more susceptible to disease and infection.

As a result, she said, widows, who are under considerable strain, often get more colds, influenza attacks or suffer increased discomfort from such chronic problems as arthritis.

Often, widows have a problem providing nutritional meals for themsives after being used to cooking for someone else for many years, she said.

There are also a number of practical problems facing widows, such as how to deal with budgetary problems or where to invest money left for them by their now-deceased partner.

Rogers said the latest Statistics Canada figures indicate there are about 13,000 widows in the Greater Victoria area, about 95 of them in the 95 to 100 age bracket.

At the other end of the scale, 120 widows were below the age of 34.

Bet McMurchy, a Victoria psychologist, will act as a group leader for the courses which will be held from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. in Room 304, 620 View, every Tuesday beginning Feb. 28.

There is an $8 fee for the seven sessions but McMurchy said financial assistance is available for those who can't afford it.

"There is a large group of widows out there and they do have problems that are specific to that group," she said.

"We feel it is time to get people together and take positive action."

Details Asked By Wolfe

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe has asked the city of Victoria to provide more details on a request for changes to the new Assessment Act.

The minister made the request during a meeting with Ald. Murray Glazier, chairman of city council's finance committee.

The city claims the existing assessment regulations, which allow apartments to be assessed at the same percentage of their market value as residential property, will give apartments an unfair tax deduction while putting tax pressure on condominiums.

The city proposes that apartments be assessed at the same rate as commercial property.

Telethon Raises $1.1M

VANCOUVER (CP) — A record $1,152,862 was pledged during the Variety Club's 12th annual Telethon during the weekend.

The club said it was the largest Telethon ever sponsored by a Variety Club which has chapters all over the world to raise money for children's charities. The weekend drive was to raise money for a new children's hospital in Vancouver.

The club hopes to raise $5 million for the hospital by 1980. It already had $1.8 million in trust before the show began.

Sponsored by Tent 47, the show was broadcast over the regional BCTV network and was viewed by an estimated 310,000 persons.

RNs Rap Training Cut

A sub-group of the Registered Nurses Association of B.C. warns that replacing three-year hospital nurses' training programs with two-year courses at community colleges could lead to a shortage of nurses in certain specialties.

The operating room nurses sub-group has sent letters to all MLAs warning that operating room experience in the student nurse curriculum has been reduced or eliminated in many instances.

"Funds are essential to provide for both the education of qualified instructors and facilities to adequately teach operating room skills at the student nurse and post-basic level," the letter states.

Secretary Olive Brown said many registered nurses are now being trained in two-year programs rather than three-year courses offered by Royal Jubilee Hospital and the St. Joseph's School of Nursing, two of the three remaining three-year programs in the province.

A brief observation period in the operating room is not sufficient to stimulate much interest in the specialty, she said. Even if the student wishes to become an operating nurse after graduation she will need more orientation than the nurse who has had four weeks of experience as a student in the operating room.

Graduates of hospital schools can expect to spend four months working in an operating room before they are really proficient. Those with two-years training may take nine months.

President Laura Foster said the only specific training programs in operating room procedures are at the B.C. Institute of Technology and St. Paul's Hospital in Vancouver.

She said the BCIT program is handicapped by a lack of funds and when programs are available they begin at very short notice, making it difficult for nurses to plan ahead if they want operating room training.

The shortage of operating room nurses is particularly felt in smaller community hospitals.

Laurie Clark of St. Joseph's agreed community colleges do not have easy access to clinical programs, even if they had the time for them

Royal Jubilee nursing school director Mary Richmond said the problem facing operating room nurses is common to many other nursing specialties.

She explained that nursing is becoming more specialized and it is less economical to train nurses for every type of work they might do in a hospital.

"If only a small number of graduates are going to go into a specialized program such as renal dialysis, intensive care or the operating room, it would be a waste of money ro train all nurses for every program," she said.

UVic Irks Photographers

The University of Victoria is using taxpayers' money to go into the professional photography business, say two commercial photographers.

They are criticizing UVic's decision to let its photo department take the pictures of this year's graduating students and their relatives.

The contract, usually put up for bids among city photographers, was given to UVic's media and technical department (Media-Tech).

Merle Somerville of Merlin Studio, who has had the contract the past two years, and Peter Chapman of Scope Photography say UVic is using tax dollars to compete against city photographers.

Somerville said professional photographers, not students, would be doing the work and that UVic might have to increase its staff at the taxpayers' expense.

Chapman said UVic is charging higher prices than some of the seven photographers invited to bid on the contract.

The photographers were asked by the president of the 1978 graduating class, Clayton Shold, to submit proposals for the right to take the pictures, Chapman said. But they were notified in December the university's own media department had been given the contract.

Family groups and other pictures would also be taken, outside the 8:30-to-4:30 business hours if neccessary, Somerville said.

Profits on graduation pictures are relatively low, but the exposure is good for business in terms of orders for portraits and wedding pictures, he said.

Media-Tech manager Edgar Lloyd said the university is not taking advantage of its situation.

SMOOTH END TO TEL STRIKE

until the contract was signed and agree to work alongside management.

"That's a dead issue now," said TWU president Bob Donnelly. "I'm very, very happy this is all over and the membership has indicated they're happy with the collective agreement too. Everything should fall into place very nicely now."

Donnelly said B.C. Tel agreed to try not to place workers alongside supervisors who have worked throughout the strike.

Jack Sambrooke, president of the TWU's Victoria local, said everything went smoothly in the city this morning.

"There have been no problems and we don't anticipate any," he said.

Sambrooke said the strike had left some bitter feelings between management and union personnel but the TWU was not asking its members to adopt a non-fraternization policy of any kind.

"Each individual is going to have to assess his own position," he said. "You can't instruct people on how to treat one another."

Based on recommendations of inquiry commissioner Mr. Justice Henry Hutcheon of the B.C. Supreme Court, the contract provides for wage increases of 45 cents an hour in the first year, 32 cents in the second and six per cent in the third year — bringing a journeyman's hourly rate to $11.14.

Necessity of building a better gas engine mothered the Dawal Motor invention of Frank Davies and partner Joe Walcer. Their novel theory, illustrated in cutaway model held by Davies, produced a more efficient long-stroke engine of fewer parts, more power and less unburned emission. Walcer's hand rests on mockup of 85 h.p. version of the working prototype perfected during the past 12 months.

Revolutionary Engine Born in a Lunch Pail

By AB KENT, Times Staff

A butcher and a retired mink farmer — both in their 60s — have invented what they say is the most practical development in gasoline engines in 100 years.

Furthermore, the pair working with amateur zeal in a draughty Central Saanich farm shed have without formal training built a cheaper, lighter, more powerful, more efficient engine than professional engineers, physicists or the automotive industry have yet come up with.

Their recently-finished Dawal Motor is the result of two years of theorizing, patent-examination and experimentation for Frank Davies, 64, and Joe Walcer, 63.

And they have thoroughly enjoyed doing it, from the moment they sketched the theory on a dinner napkin to the granting of patents by three countries.

The motor looks like a small motorcycle or outboard boat engine without the bulky crankcases of either. And it purrs like a big, fine-tuned V-8.

But in theory it bears closer resemblance to the rotary engine which made its appearance in Germany 20 years ago, and more recently in a Japanese car, a development of the Wankel.

Both men wanted a machine that would burn less fuel, cause less wear and friction, make less noise and be more efficient than anything before.

The Dawal and Wankel are based on the idea of a single crank pushed by a smooth flow of internal combustion power strokes.

Instead of the Wankel's Y-shaped piston rotating in a single cylinder, the Dawal comes closer to perfection by using parallel, twin pistons in double-ended cylinders joined by a T-shaped connecting rod.

The top of the T is pivoted on a sliding block and the crank pin is attached to the tail of the T.

There are only five major moving parts, and no valves, just cylinder ports for inlet and exhaust.

In operation, the motor fires rapidly, in much closer succession and with pistons moving at far higher speed than conventional automotive engines, producing virtually continuous torque on the crankshaft.

As a two-cycle engine, it develops four-cylinder power comparable with some of the heavier multi-cylinder outboards, for example, at a fraction of the weight.

The prototype Dawal weighing some 60 pounds measures about a foot square, and about as deep with flywheel and supercharger-timing pulleys. It compares with a 9 h.p. outboard but turns out an astonishing 59 h.p., according to computer analysis.

Davies and Walcer have a mockup of their second Dawal, which will have main castings of aluminum, weigh about 80 pounds, measure 14½ by 14½ by 5½ inches, and turn out 85 h.p. — virtually unheard of power-to-weight ratio for running a small car.

How could two non-professionals new to inventing and unkown to each other until two years ago come up with a patentable machine in a field where the pros have striven and failed?

In the first place, by amazing coincidence, both men had the same idea for an improved engine, and they took the classic approach to developing it, from discussing the theory, to drawing the plans, to building the engine.

"We didn't know if it was going to work at first," said Davies. "We just had the confidence in our theory."

"We figured it should run without a flywheel," Walcer explained.

"And it did, from the very start . . . the first pull on the cord . . . it fired and ran right then and there," Davies added.

A neighbor was there to take a picture, and the inventors' patent attorney Brian Woods of Vancouver stood by as the little engine sputtered to life. Walcer and Davies, as excited as a couple of schoolboys, remain buoyed with enthusiasm to this day.

"We've had a real thrill building this thing," said Walcer, recalling how the two of them got together.

He said he was working on a new house for his friend Jack McCauley and asked for a good helper. McCauley sent him Davies and one spring day while they were roofing together, Walcer mentioned conversationally that General Motors had announced that morning it was paying $5 million for development of the Wankel.

"I said I had studied it and couldn't see it. I said, 'they're crazy — the damn thing doesn't work — too high revs.'

"'I agree,' Frank said.

" 'I have an idea that will beat the Wankel', I said.

"And he said, 'I do, too.' "

The day was warm and they climbed down to the lawn with their lunches, heads full of innovations. They talked and as Walcer related it, "Frank looked in his lunchbox and he had a nice piece of cake wrapped up. He took it out and drew the first print on the dinner napkin. We both had the same idea."

They agreed they had to get to work on it, and after more discussion, Davies drew up proper plans, they went to Vancouver to buy a metal lathe, acquired a drill press and welding equipment.

Patent searches had disclosed nothing similar to what they proposed and in March of last year the U. S. patent office granted them patent number 4,011,842. Canada and Japan have also granted patents for the Dawal Motor.

Where the two go from here depends upon how they choose to market the invention, which has cost them $13,000 to date. One man who is interested in the Dawal as a potential source of heavy engine power is Claude Butler, to whom they are indebted. They raided his Butler Bros. Logging Ltd. truck repair scrap heap three times to get pieces they could fashion into parts for their motor.

'Got to be Better Way' —Returning Tel Clerk

"I'm happy to be back but, you know, there's got to be a better way to solve labor disputes," B.C. Tel clerk Liz LaPointe said today.

She was in the first wave of union workers who returned to their jobs this morning as the 81-day strike-lockout came to an end.

"I don't think many employees lost too much financially," she said. "But the whole thing was rather unpleasant. I don't know why it had to last so long."

Her sentiments were echoed by Rick Dack, 31, a member of B.C. Tel's installation and repair crews.

"This thing should have been over long ago," he said.

"I didn't mind it for a while but it is good to get back into a regular routine again."

Dack said most union employees expected a strike or lockout — they had been without a contract since the beginning of January, 1977 — and they had started saving money.

Few people had to borrow but most went through their savings.

"We didn't lose very much, really. Most of us did some repairs around the house, painting and remodelling. Normally we would have had to pay someone to do it. I saved myself quite a bit of money."

Mrs. LaPointe, 43, said she also was prepared for the work stoppage, helped by the fact her husband is steadily employed by B.C. Forest Products.

"It wasn't the money I missed so much as the fact my routine was interrupted. When you are used to working for so many years . . . well, I was like a fish out of water. It was hard to realize my time was my own."

She said any bitter feelings which arose during the dispute will soon disappear but she hoped she wouldn't have to go through the experience again.

Dack said he wasn't looking forward to another strike-lockout either but expected there will be one.

"When you're dealing with a multinational company like this, what can you expect?"

Employees who did go into debt were looking forward to their retroactive paycheque to help bail them out.

They signed a three-year contract retroactive to Jan. 1, 1977, and they will get 45 cents an hour for every hour worked last year. That means a retro cheque of $877.50 or about $600 after the holdback for taxes. Retro cheques usually take more than a month to prepare.

In addition to 45 cents an hour for 1977, all employees were awarded a raise of 32 cents an hour for 1978 and a six per cent pay increase for 1979.

Despite the increase, the union employees had mixed feelings about whether it had all been worthwhile.

For management, public information officer Ken Horodyski said he is convinced nobody gains from a work stoppage.

"Certainly the customers suffer. The employees can never make up the lost pay and management people have had strained relationships in their family lives because of the long hours they have to work.

"A few people will be bitter but hopefully most of us can get together again. I think we will. The vote to return to work was 91.4 per cent so that means that the majority are happy to be back. The ones you hear complaining make up, what, 8.6 per cent?"

The return began at 7 a.m. when telephone operators came to work, replacing the male supervisors who had been answering phones for the past 81 days.

Repair lines were in operation by 7:30 a.m. and the repair crews warming up their trucks by 8 a.m.

'Bomb' a Dud

Police and armed forces explosives experts spent a tense two hours Saturday removing a harmless bottle from the rear of B.C. Telephone Co. downtown offices.

The label said the bottle contained nitroglycerine, but contents proved otherwise when the it was destroyed a half-mile away at the heliport in Victoria West.

Police were called about 11:25 a.m. when a security guard found the bottle near a doorway on Johnson. A team from the CFB Esquimalt fleet diving unit collected the bottle and placed it aboard a special disposal truck after the area was cordoned off.

Police also blocked all intersections leading to Johnson Street en route to the heliport, allowing the disposal truck to proceed without interruption.

AIRWEST SETTLMENT 'PREMATURE'

AirWest has resolved some issues with its Teamster employees but other areas of dispute remain, a company spokesman said today.

He said reports on the weekend that an agreement had been reached were premature.

The company and union negotiators held meetings today in an effort to resolve the outstanding issues.

Supervisory personnel have been operating the air service since the strike began Nov. 13.

Arsonist Suspected In Fires

Arson investigators have been assigned to two weekend fires that appear to have been deliberately set, one of them in the banquet and entertainment wing of a downtown hotel.

Victoria fire department deputy chief Mike Belton said fire in the Tally-ho Travelodge, 3020 Douglas, caused at least $5,000 damage shortly after 2 a.m. Sunday.

Flames appear to have started in a stack of tables in the hall adjoining a north side banquet room, spread to walls and ceiling and filled the rooms above — including offices and cocktail bar — with smoke.

A tenant at Rosemount Apartments, 470 Gorge East, used a pump can extinguisher Friday night to put out burning carpeting on a stairway where owner A. K. Kingsley, 460 Gorge East, said a similar fire was extinguished in 1975.

Brenda Leader, 23, of 2945 Shelbourne, was treated for burns to the back of her hand received in a kitchen fire Friday afternoon. Firemen said deep-frying fat overheated and burst into flame, burning cupboards and causing about $1,000 damage.

Tory Flags Pilfered

Three flags mounted above the Progressive Conservative party's Oak Bay riding headquarters at 3195 Shelbourne were stolen overnight Sunday.

The flags — the Maple Leaf, the B.C. flag and the Union Jack — were worth about $25 each and were last seen at about 5:30 p.m. Sunday, a party spokesman said.

"Somebody wants to give us a lot of attention," he added.

Saanich police have been asked to investigate.

CRYSTAL GARDENS GIRDERS SOUND

The Crystal Gardens structure is much stronger than first thought and it can be shored up with only minor repairs, architect David Hambleton said today.

He said it was originally estimated that steel would have to be removed for sandblasting and then reinstalled. However, most of the work can be done with wire brushes without removing the steel, he said.

The discovery will help keep the project within its over-all budget of $2 million, he said.

"We cannot spend more than the $2 million for everything, including renovations as well as all the other things. I'm certain we will be able to stay within that budget now."

He said a few steel beams that have been corroded will have to be replaced but most are sound.

Casings around the steel are being removed and the steel will be painted after it is brushed.

The old Crystal will be turned into a conservatory, teahouse and meeting hall after the structural renovations are completed. The building is owned by the provincial government.

A LONG NIGHT AT QUEEN'S PARK

Times News Services

Billings Bighorns outlasted New Westminster Bruins 8-5 in a Western Canada Hockey League game that took three hours and 35 minutes to play at New Westminster's Queen's Park Arena Sunday.

Billings led 2-1 at the end of the first period, 6-3 at the end of the second and 7-3 before a bench-clearing brawl halted the game at 3:49 of the final period.

Twelve players received game misconducts and 198 minutes in penalties were handed out after the incident that held up the game for about 45 minutes. Billings' goaltender Tim Thomlison had his nose broken during the fighting.

Feelings seemed to run high throughout the game. There were two fights and a minor scuffle in the first period. The second period, although relatively free of penalties, was a hard-hitting affair.

The loss kept Bruins mired in the Western Division cellar while the Bighorns, battling for first place in the Central Division, remained three points behind Lethbridge Broncos, who protected their lead by defeating Flin Flon Bombers 8-5.

Regina Pats bombed Saskatoon Blades 14-4 in another Sunday game.

A game between Brandon Wheat Kings and Seattle Breakers was postponed Sunday because of ice conditions at the Seattle Centre Arena.

A spokesman for the Breakers said the ice was declared unsafe. The decision to postpone the game was agreed to by Brandon coach Dunc McCallum, Seattle coach Les Calder and Seattle owner Ephrim Steinke.

Date for the game has not been set, the spokesman said.

He said a tennis tournament at the arena ended late Saturday night and ice-maintenance personnel were unable to get the ice into satisfactory condition for the game.

LOOKS GOOD but goal-scoring attempt by Montreal's Guy Lafleur (10) actually was just close call. New York Ranger netminder Wayne Thomas got enough of puck to direct this shot over goal. Lafleur came back later, however, to score as Montreal beat Rangers 5-3 to equal National Hockey League's longest unbeaten streak — 23 games. (AP Wirephoto).

It's All Right to Dream Nobody Gets Maimed

In my heart I know I am a quarterback — steely-eyed, rifle-armed, mind like a computer and a neat nickname like Snake.

I'd make a great Snake. Everybody says so.

Would have been All-American, All-Pro, all-everything if I'd had the chance. Discrimination kept me out — discrimination, bad eyes, sloppy body and slow feet. Nobody wanted a kid who ran a 9.1. Not when it was for the 40.

But I'd have shown 'em. So would you, right? So would we all.

It is the North American dream. We sit by the thousands in front of the TV screen, watching the Dallas cheerleaders and thinking "There, but for a job, a wife and a mortgage, go I." Is it our fault that time got in the way?

Well, get ready. Eric Guthrie, innkeeper on the B.C. Government's version of Fantasy Island, is giving-us a second chance.

Eric Guthrie has had a couple of nicknames. When he came out of Boise State University to B.C. Lions he was The Canadian Rifle. For two or three years he was The Kid, as in "Give The Kid a chance." Now The Kid is almost 31, convinced in his heart that the chance was too long coming, dreaming that this year Saskatchewan Roughriders will give him a better shot at spelling off Ron Lancaster.

But that's for later. Right now he is the co-ordinator of a new recreational government-sponsored touch football league for adults, to be played Saturday and Sunday mornings for 10 weeks starting April 29.

"What we're trying to do, really," he says, "is give people a reason for the jogging and the keep-fit programs. This is a fun league. We hope to have men's teams, women's teams, mixed teams, involving people of all ages."

The game is one-hand touch, with no other body contact allowed. Rosters will be limited to 15 players, with only seven on the field at any one time. It's played on a regulation-sized football field, with three downs to make 10 yards running or passing.

Only one defender is allowed to rush the quarterback, and the defensive team lines up five yards in front of the ball instead of one. Games are 80 minutes long, in four 20-minute quarters.

The inevitable flaw in any recreational league is that some take it more seriously than others. Teams are stacked, and when the serious ones go out against the fun types, the scores grow embarrassing. Guthrie feels they've licked the problem.

"We'll have two divisions with two franchise fees," he says. "The ones who want it to be serious and feel they have good teams will enter the TopFlight league and pay a fee of $225. The others will go into the Recreational league and pay $150. That's only $10 per person, which makes it cheaper than a lot of sports, and they can just sit back and have fun.

"The top-Flight league will be fun, too, but for the better players. I play on a team now with a lot of the old and current B.C. Lions. For us it's a way of working out for the season, but a team like that naturally wouldn't want to go into the Recreational league. With the two levels there should be a spot for everyone."

For the franchise fee, a team gets a ball, team shirts, referees and other game officials, and handbooks laying out the rules and basic plays and formations designed for the sevenman game. The schedule runs in the spring because there are more parks and officials available.

Guthrie is busy these days appointing regional co-ordinaters all over the province. He wants leagues in every city, town and village. For now, people who want in can write or phone him at Sport B.C.

"The good thing about this thing," he maintains, "is that great athletic ability isn't necessary. People can just get 15 friends together, form a team, throw on the shirts and have a really good time. The amount of effort and seriousness put into it is up to the individual team."

The touch football game apparantly is very big in the east—so big that a brewery is considering sponsorship of a national championship. Guthrie considers this first season the mere tip of the eventual iceberg.

"Wait until the interest builds," he insists. "Give us a season or two. Right now we're getting the publicity going."

He has plans for an honorary political all-star team, and rejects the idea that politicans can't play because instead of touching they'd automatically try to pick your pocket.

There's also a media team being formed for a game against the Lions. "You wanna play?" he asks.

Well, of course. I can see it now ...

Here's the all-pro quarterback, dropping back, reading the zone. He pumps once, twice ... and hits Jim Young deep! Touchdown, Dirty 30 from Potty 40! And the crowd goes wild!

But no. Because I can see something else ...

Here's the all-pro quarterback, dropping back, reading the zone. He pumps once, twice ... and Gary Robinson drops him with a crushing forearm to the throat!

Taylor is writhing on the ground. His glasses are broken! His truss is broken!

Robinson is standing over him, smiling! Let's get our parabolic mike down there and see if we can hear the conversation:

"Sorry," Robinson says. "I guess I kinda forgot. Tee hee hee ..."

Ballard Offers Financial Help

HAMILTON (CP) — Harold Ballard, owner of Toronto Maple Leafs, says he is willing to carry the major financial burden toward construction of a 15,000-seat arena in Hamilton, suitable for major league hockey.

Ballard, who wants to buy the Hamilton Tiger-Cats football team, said he would eventually like to establish a National Hockey League team in the city.

He also said he knows of other persons willing to financially back such a plan.

Knickle Tarnishes Cougars' Return

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Saturday's Western Canada Hockey League scenario at Memorial Arena could be titled: A Tale of Two Goalies.

One was good, one was gutsy:

Brandon Wheat Kings got their best value in a Knickle, enough to close out a 4-2 victory over the Victoria Cougars.

Rick Knickle turned in a sparkling performance as the Eastern Division leaders spoiled Victoria's homecoming party. Coming off an outstanding road trip and to their largest home crowd of the season (3,418), the Cougars peppered Knickle with 50 shots but managed only two goals.

The Wheat Kings, in turn, fired 42 shots at Steve Amiss but the Victoria netminder could hardly be blamed. He played well and the surprising thing about it was that he played at all.

Running to catch a bus Friday, Amiss stumbled and twisted an ankle. Despite some pain and considerable swelling, Amiss managed, after a tape job, to squeeze his foot into a skate boot and heed the call to action on Saturday.

"I don't know how he did it," was the comment of Dan Buie, the Cougars' doctor. "It isn't serious but there was considerable swelling."

Amiss, a standout during the team's recent travels, underwent treatment Sunday and will probably start again tonight when the Cougars play host to Billings Bighorns.

Knickle, 17, is a Halifax native. Brandon coach Dunc McCallum said he is one of 27 goaltenders to undergo Wheat King scrutiny this year and "probably the best."

Knickle started the season with the tier two Brandon Travellers but got the call from the Wheat Kings because of an injury to one of McCallum's two regulars. He made his WCHL debut in New Westminster and beat the Bruins 5-3 with a sensational display. Needless to say, he never returned to the Travellers.

As good as he was, the Cougars made it easier Saturday with some poor shooting. On several excellent scoring chances, Victoria shooters failed to test Knickle by shooting very wide of the target, a legacy, no doubt, of the curved stick.

As well, the Cougars refused to include point men in their attack. Yet Knickle's most troublesome moments seemed to come from long shots. Curt Fraser scored Victoria's first on one vicious shot from fairly well out. Bob Jansch tapped in a point shot for the second to give Victoria a 2-1 lead heading into the third and final period.

Brandon's attack, on the other hand, fared well with McCallum's bread-and-butter combination of Ray Allison and Bill Derlago. The latter scored Brandon's first goal and set up the other three, including Allison's two within 44 seconds at the start of the final period that turned the game around.

SPARKES TAKES COAST CROWN

VANCOUVER — Bernie Sparkes of the Vancouver Curling Club was much the best in the men's Pacific Coast Curling Association championship at his home club at the weekend.

Sparkes defeated Gary Sigurdson of Cloverdale 10-3 in the "B" final after disposing of Victoria's Keith Dagg by the same score in the "A" final Saturday afternoon.

Sparkes now meets his former third, Bert Gretzinger of Kelowna in a best-of-three provincial final that starts at 7 at the Vancouver Club tonight.

Second game is scheduled for noon Tuesday, with a third game, if necessary, at 7 p.m. Tuesday night.

Sparkes went through the eight-rink, double-knockout Coast competition undefeated. He got by clubmate Ken Neuman 6-5 in his toughest game by scoring two on the 10th end. Sparkes then defeated Sigurdson 7-4, Dagg in the "A" final and Brock Giles of Vancouver Club 5-3 in the "B" semi-finals.

It marked the fifth time Sparkes has been on a PCCA championship rink and his third as skip. He has represented the province in the Canadian championship twice as a skip.

Gretzinger played third for Sparkes in the 1976 Brier and was named all-star third.

His Kelowna rink captured the B.C. Curling Association (Interior) title by winning both the "A" and "B" events, defeating Prince George's Paul Delver both times, 3-2 in the "A" final and then 6-5.

Curling with Sparkes are third Ron Thompson, second Al Cook and lead Keiven Bauer. Gretzinger's crew includes third Barry Smith, second Dan Worley and lead Ron Stein.

Dagg put up the best showing of the three Victoria rinks as Tim Horrigan of the Racquet Club and Steve Skillings of Victoria Club both went out in two straight.

Horrigan lost to Dagg, 8-2, and Giles, 7-6 on a last-rock draw to the four-foot.

Skillings, an 8-7 loser to Sigurdson on Friday, bowed to Neuman 9-5 Saturday. A steal of three on the seventh end was the deciding factor.

Brock and Brent Giles played in the event despite the sudden death of their mother the week before the competition.

Winner of the Sparkes-Gretzinger playoff will represent B.C. in the Canadian championships, to be held in Vancouver's Pacific Coliseum March 5-11.

Canadiens Run Streak to Record

By The Canadian Press

The way Montreal Canadiens were talking, one might think the National Hockey League club was in some sort of difficulty.

"We're playing just well enough not to lose," said Mario Tremblay after Montreal's 5-3 victory Sunday over New York Rangers.

Tremblay was perfectly correct, but he might have added the Canadiens have been doing it for 23 games, tying a league record for consecutive games without a loss.

Guy Lafleur, Rejean Houle and Steve Shutt scored goals in a span of 3:01 late in the second period to spark the Canadiens to their 18th victory in the 23 games.

Their last loss was a 5-3 decision to the Penguins at Pittsburgh on Dec. 17. The unbeaten streak started the next night with a 2-0 victory over the Flyers at Philadelphia.

The record was set by Boston Bruins from Dec. 22, 1940, through Feb. 23, 1941, and first tied by Philadelphia from Jan. 29 through March 18, 1976. The Canadiens are in position to break the mark against the Blues at St. Louis on Wednesday night.

In other games Sunday, Philadelphia defeated Washington Capitals 4-1, New York Islanders and Cleveland Barons tied 2-2, Atlanta Flames tied Chicago Black Hawks 2-2, Detroit Red Wings thrashed Vancouver Canucks 8-3 and Minnesota North Stars tied Colorado Rockies 3-3.

The Bruins had weekend home games against Philadelphia and St. Louis postponed because of a snow emergency in Boston.

Tremblay and Yvan Cournoyer contributed the Canadiens' other goals at New York, while Ron Greschner scored two for the Rangers and Don Murdoch had one.

"We played pretty well," said Montreal goaltender Ken Dryden. "Had we not, we could have been in for a surprise."

"But we're not playing up to our capabilities," said defenceman Larry Robinson. "We show streaks of what we can do, and when we see we're not doing it consistently, we know we're not playing well.

"Hopefully, we're just going through a phase. Thank God we're not getting burned by the way we're playing. We must be doing something right."

Blazer Streak Ends

By Associated Press

The home-court advantage doesn't mean much if you aren't playing your game. And Portland Trail Blazers weren't Sunday.

"We just didn't play well," said guard Lionel Hollins. "There were too many turnovers and we didn't do the right things at the right time."

Because they didn't, the defending National Basketball Association champions had their mammoth 44-game home winning streak stopped with a 103-101 defeat by Denver Nuggets.

The Blazers hadn't been beaten in Portland since they lost a game to Cleveland Cavaliers on March 4, 1977. Included in their streak was a regular-season 34-game mark, two shy of the NBA record.

"There have been a lot of teams that had them on the ropes," said Denver coach Larry Brown. "It's great to come in here and beat a great team like Portland."

David Thompson, who had a key basket in the final seconds for Denver, credited the victory to his team's ability to keep Portland from running.

"To run with Portland is almost impossible," Thompson said. "We controlled the tempo of the game. They still got some fast breaks in the third quarter, but we settled down after that."

Elsewhere in the NBA Sunday, Philadelphia '76ers defeated Seattle SuperSonics 109-99, Phoenix Suns outscored Washington Bullets 121-109, New Jersey Nets edged New York Knicks 112-110, Houston Rockets trimmed New Orleans Jazz 119-112, Indiana Pacers stopped Chicago Bulls 111-94, Kansas City Kings beat Cleveland Cavaliers 101-88 and Atlanta Hawks defeated Los Angeles Lakers 116-103. The Milwaukee Bucks-Boston Celtics game was postponed by bad weather.

On Saturday, New York beat Milwaukee 133-122, Kansas City defeated Chicago 95-90, Detroit Pistons downed New Orleans 106-96 and San Antonio Spurs dropped Golden State Warriors 131-122.

Down by 10 points in the third quarter, Denver took the lead for good on a pair of free throws by Darnell Hillman with 3:16 to go. Portland stayed close and was within one, at 99-98, with 1:15 left.

But the Blazers turned the ball over on a fast-break try and Thompson, who paced the Nuggets with 22 points, floated home a 10-footer with 19 seconds remaining to make it 101-98.

Portland's Lloyd Neal made one of three free throws with six seconds to go as the Blazers tried to get the offensive rebound for the tying shot. But the rebound went to Denver's Bobby Jones and Mack Calvin hit a pair of free throws with one second left to clinch the verdict for Denver.

Jackson, Willis Lead Tenpinners

Ray Jackson and Bob Willis each collected two titles and big chunks of prize money Sunday after the 38th annual championship tournament of the Victoria Tenpin Bowling Association wound up at Mayfair Lanes.

Included in the harvest were coveted all-events crowns, which are decided on aggregate scores in the three events — team, singles and doubles.

Jackson performed his heroics in the handicap section, earning his all-events victory as he fashioned three-game scores of 584, 511 and 461, added a total handicap count of 486 and finished with a 2,042 total.

That was good for a 55-pin margin over runner-up Don Ireland, who was 15 in front of Phil Norton.

Jackson's 584 tally came in the singles event, in which he rolled games of 201, 192 and 191, then used a 162 handicap for a blockbusting 746 tally. Robert Dryburgh followed at 723 with Ron Sather third at 710.

Willis was a consistent pinblaster as he marched to all-events honors in the scratch section, putting together three-game counts of 585, 583 and 614 for a total of 1,195. On the way, he added the 583 tally to partner Wain Hayton's 612 for a score of 1,195 and a triumph in the scratch doubles.

Henry Loo, rolling 199-215-228 — 642, captured the scratch singles and Bush Boys took the scratch team event with 2,820. Members of the winning team were John Wenzel (644), Brian Grexton (573), Fred Lobbezoo (550), Ken Grexton (538) and Larry Jacobs (515).

In the handicap team race, King Louie keglers — Don Ireland (622), John Weiker (590), Jack Thompson (551), Bob Hill (504) and Frank Evans (476) — came out on top as they used a handicap count of 378 for a 3,121 total.

Bud Michell and Vern Michell went to town in the handicap doubles, earning the top money as Vern rolled 629, including a 235 game, and Bud notched 511. They added their combined handicap of 213 for 1,353 for a solid margin over Ken Grant and Doug Regimbal, who were second at 1,298.

Competition in the tourney was spead over two weekends and included 86 teams, 174 doubles entrants and 211 contestants in singles.

BETH HEIDEN
... misses title

Heiden in Good Form But Canadians Suffer

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Eric Heiden, the defending champion, won three of four races over the two-day competition to take the over-all gold medal Sunday at the world sprint speed skating championships.

Heiden, 19, of Madison, Wis., wound up with 154.905 points, nearly three points ahead of his nearest competitor, Frode Ronning of Norway, who won the over-all silver with 156.955.

Heiden won the 500- and 1,000-metre heats on Saturday, was second to Ronning in the 500 metres Sunday and capped off the competition with a time of one minute, 16.52 seconds in the second 1,000-metre heat, nearly two seconds faster than Johan Granath of Sweden, who finished third overall.

Eric's 18-year-old sister Beth held the over-all lead through three races but lost it Sunday to Liubov Sadchikova of the Soviet Union in the final race to take the over-all silver medal. Sadchikova, a 26-year-old physical education teacher from Smolensk, won the 500 and 1,000-metre races Sunday to edge Heiden with 174.670 points. Heiden had 174.850. Erwina Rys Ferens of Poland won the bronze medal with 177.485.

Times both days were kept well off the world records by frequent snowfall that kept maintenance crews from wet-mopping the ice before races.

Sadchikova also won the 1,000 Saturday in 1:28.00—the time that gave her the title—with Beth Heiden second in 1:28.82 and Sophie Westenbroek of the Netherlands third in 1:28.89.

Eric Heiden came close to sweeping all of the men's gold meadals. He won at both distances on Saturday, clocked 38.69 to Ronning's 38.52 in Sunday's 500, then salted away the over-all gold medal with a time more than one second faster than his winning time Saturday.

Canadians—especially world men's indoor champion Gaetan Boucher of Quebec City and Sylvia Burka of Winnipeg, last year's women's sprint champion, had disappointing finishes.

Burka finished in 10th place over all, Kathy Vogt of Winnipeg was 12th and Pat Durnin of Winnipeg was 13th. On Sunday, Vogt was eight in the 500 metres, Burka was 11th and Durnin was 12th.

Boucher finished 31st over all while Don Bumstead of Dawson Creek, B.C., was 24th and Jacques Thibault of Quebec City, 25. In the 500 on Sunday, Boucher was sixth, Thibault 17th and Bumstead 26th.

On Saturday in the women's 500 metres, Burka was eighth in a time of 44.12.9 seconds, Vogt finished 12th in 44.37 and Durnin was 14th in 44.51.

In the men's 1,000 metres, Boucher was seventh in 1:19.40, Bumstead wound up 22nd in 1:21.89 and Thibault was 26th in 1:22.50. Burka was 10th in the women's 1,000 metres in 1:30.90, with Durnin 16th in 1:32.38 and Vogt 17th in 1:32.50.

On the men's side Saturday, Boucher was 14th in the 500 metres in 39.53 seconds, Thibault was 19th in 39.97 and Bumstead was 27th in 40.86.

'Professor' Gives Clinic

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Carlos Palomino takes acting lessons and gives boxing lessons.

It was Palomino the teacher who appeared Saturday at this gambling-showbiz capital to give a clinic on how to methodically destroy an opponent in the prize ring.

Palomino picked up $125,000 for the demonstration in which he kept the World Boxing Association welterweight championship.

The student was Ryu Sorimachi, a good fighter who learned the hard way.

"They say when the body dies, the head will fall," said the professor who battered the Japanese challenger brutally about the body in the sixth round and then knocked him out at 2:03 of the seventh with a crashing left hook to the jaw.

It was an impressive fifth title defence and it certainly improved Palomino's value as a boxing property.

"I would like to see him fight David Green of Britain or Masoun Mohatar, who fights out of Spain," said Bob Arum, who promoted the Palomino-Suramachi fight at the Hilton Hotel.

Of course, Arum and a lot of other promoters would like to land a fight between Palomino and Pepino Cuevas of Mexico, the World Boxing Association champion.

The WBC's current No. 1 contender is unbeaten Wilfredo Benitez of Puerto Rico who could get a shot at Palomino in September or October.

Palomino originally was scheduled to make a mandatory defence against the No. 1 contender in June, but Arum said Benitez and Jose Sulaiman, WBC president, have agreed that Palomino does not have to make the defence until the fall.

Benitez is scheduled to meet lightweight champion Roberto Duran of Panama in a 10-round non title fight in New York April 27. That fight could knock Benitez out of a mandatory title shot.

"I would say if he gets beat by a lightweight I don't think he would be the No. 1 welterweight," said Jackie McCoy, Palomino's manager.

LATE NIGHT, NEW MARK FOR DEBBIE

RICHFIELD, Ohio (CP) — Debbie Brill of Aldergrove, B.C., in the final event which ended well past midnight, set a Canadian and meet high jump record of six feet, 3¾ inches Saturday while winning the event at the Knights of Columbus track and field meet.

Brill, who set the previous Canadian standard of 6-3½ two weeks ago, then missed three attempts at the world indoor mark of 6-5¼.

Male Skaters Find the Spotlight

It has always been the women — Carol Heiss, Tenley Albright, Peggy Fleming, Dorothy Hamill and Linda Fratianne — reigning as the prima donnas of figure skating, winning the applause and adoration of fans around the world.

But the exciting and athletic men's performances drew a thunderous response at the U.S. figure skating championships as a crowd of 9,500 watched the men's five-minute freestyle routines in Memorial Coliseum on Saturday night — the largest crowd of the four-day competition.

Tickner's dashing freestyle and his strong showing in the earlier events led to his second consecutive U.S. championship. Second place went to Santee, who gave Tickner a close run but missed one triple jump in his freestyle. Scott Hamilton, of Littleton, Colo., took third.

"There are no household names among in the men," said Santee, 20, of Park Ridge, Ill. "Skating has always been known as a ladies' sport — the grace and all that.

"But I think that's changing now," he added. "In the last three or four years in the world championships the men have provided the excitement. It's a different brand of skating."

Santee's freestyle included five triple jumps. Tickner's program featured some intricate footwork and included four triple jumps and a dramatic Flamenco-style interpretation.

Tickner, Santee and Hamilton will represent the United States in the men's competition at the world championships in Ottawa from March 7-12. At the 1977 worlds in Tokyo, Santee placed fourth and Tickner fifth.

Also skating for the United States in the worlds will be national women medallists Fratianne, Lisa-Marie Allen and Priscilla Hill; senior pairs Tai Babilonia and Randy Gardner, Gail Hamula and Frank Sweiding; and Sheryl Franks and Michael Botticelli; and gold dance couples Stacey Smith and John Summers, and Carol Fox and Richard Dalley.

Tickner, 24, of Littleton, Colo., led throughout all three phases of the competition. The judges awarded his freestyle performance three 5.9s out of a possible 6.0.

"I was pleased with my performance," Tickner said as he came off the ice, sweating and holding a bouquet of carnations. "It wasn't my best, but I didn't miss anything."

England Falters

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (Reuter) — A strong batting performance by captain Geoff Boycott could not save England from losing the initiative to New Zealand at close of play Sunday on the third day of the first cricket test.

Boycott batted for almost 7½ hours to top scorers with 77 when England's first innings ended 50 minutes before stumps with a total of 215, 13 runs behind New Zealand's first innings score of 228.

At close of play, New Zealand was 12 for no wicket in its second innings.

England resumed Sunday morning at 89 for two and the team's batsmen could not handle the tight New Zealand bowling attack.

There are two ways to find out how much it would cost to rebuild your home.

And the difference between them could mean thousands of dollars to you.

The first way is to consult your insurance agent or broker and use information available to him on building costs in your area. This will help you arrive at a reasonable assessment of the re-construction cost. If you have an unusual home ask your agent to arrange for a special appraisal or consult a local builder.

The second is to simply wait for a disaster and then find out directly from the builder. Unfortunately this method could lead to a very unpleasant surprise. Probably you'd find you have greatly undervalued your property.

Construction costs have risen enormously in the last decade. Only by periodic reviews with your insurance representative can you adequately protect the investment you have in your home.

"As your home appreciates in value, your insurance should keep pace."

For most people, a home is the most important single investment ever made. Isn't it worth the few hours a year it would take to adequately protect that investment?

Private insurance companies want you to know how insurance works. And how it can work better for you.

MARK TRAIL

The Bridge Expert

On occasion, a partnership will voluntarily purchase the contract in seven-card trump suit (eight or more is ideal), but it is the relatively rare day when a suit containing fewer than seven cards will be selected voluntarily as the trump suit. In today's deal, the latter came into being, with North-South deliberately electing to play the final contract with but four trumps in the combined hands! The deal came up in a tournament.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠ A 10 5 4 ♡ A 7 6 5 ◇ 6 5 3 ♣ 7 5
WEST ♠ 3 2 ♡ K 4 ◇ 4 2 ♣ K J 9 8 6 4 2		EAST ♠ J 9 8 ♡ 10 9 8 2 ◇ J 9 8 7 ♣ 10 3
	SOUTH ♠ K Q 7 6 ♡ Q J 3 ◇ A K Q 10 ♣ A Q

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	Dble.	Rdble.	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♠.

South's opening two-club bid was artificial (South could have been void of clubs), and announced a game-going hand. West's double stated that he was loaded in clubs, and that if East obtained the lead, he should lead a club. North, with two aces opposite a game-going hand announced by South, assumed that redouble would show a good hand. So he redoubled.

After West had opened a spade, and North put his hand down as the dummy, South was quite surprised: he expected North to have lots of clubs, since South's opening two-club bid had promised nothing in clubs. However, South was able to walk a tightrope nicely to bring home his redoubled contract.

The opening spade lead was won by North's ace, after which a spade was led to South's king. The jack of hearts was then led, and a successful finesse was taken against West's king. A low heart was now played, West's king being taken by dummy's ace.

A diamond to South's ace was then followed by the cashing of the diamond king. When the queen of diamonds was played next, West had no option but to trump. He was then forced to lead a trump, and South won the trick with his queen.

Thus South made two tricks in each suit, and ended up with his contracted-for eight tricks, redoubled.

Married or single, the year features significant changes and travel. March and December could be outstanding or memorable months. Gemini, Virgo persons play important roles in your life.

"Here's something funny," said Steve. "Helen is just four times as old as John."

Clare nodded. "Sure, but what's so odd about that?

"Nothing," Steve replied. "But in 6 years' time, when Helen will of course be older, she'll be only twice his age."

How old was John?

'Seconds' Jolted In Cup Contests

Three squads from the second division bowed to lower-ranked teams as four upsets spiced second-round activity in the knockout competition.

Goals by John Hughes and Joe Underwood sparked Gorge Molsons of the fourth division to the day's most startling verdict, a 2-1 conquest of second-division DaVinci.

Lakehill Freisa and Labatts were other second-division teams to bow. Third-division Saanich Braves blanked Freisa 2-0 while Oak Bay Reserves, also from the third division, upset Labatts 2-1.

And a fourth-division team from Port Alberni stuck to its upsetting ways. Surprise conquerers of the third-division leading Vantreights in the first round, Port Alberni also added University of Victoria Norsemen, another third division team, to its list of victims, 4-1.

Nine of the 10 premier division teams advanced to the third round. The only first-division failing was experienced by Nanaimo City, which bowed 3-1 to division rival Powell River.

Dave Shields won the junior Olympic crown, Wilson Louie took the juvenile boys' title and Brenda Shields topped the juvenile girls' class.

Two other members of the club finished well up.

Islanders Hop On Substitute

Kerry Park Islanders got the jump on a willing defenceman-turned-goalie to build up a commanding first-period lead and then cruise to an easy 15-1 victory over Victoria Ray's Red Wings in South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League action Saturday at Mill Bay.

Defenceman Jay Purdy started in goal for Ray's when regular netminder Marty Blitch was delayed because of car problems. Islanders pumped 10 goals past the willing but inexperienced Purdy. Blitch then showed up to handle duties for the final two periods and held Islanders to five goals.

Tom Turnbull scored Victoria's only goal in the first period.

DREAM DUEL OFF AGAIN

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AFP) — The long-awaited clash between world 1,500-metre record holder Filbert Bayi and John Walker, the Olympic champion who holds the mile record, is off again.

Walker left hospital in Hamilton Sunday after an operation on his right leg and said it would be at least two months before he could start training again.

The series that was to pit Tanzanian Bayi against Walker was to be raced in March in Australia and New Zealand.

Johnson Nails DataTech

RENTON, Wash. — Leon Johnson pounded the last nail into Victoria DataTech's coffin during the final day of the annual Renton Roadrunners' senior "A" men's basketball tournament here Sunday.

Johnson, who stands six feet, five and one-half inches, was hitting from both the inside and outside while pouring in 46 points to lead Brewster Packing to a 113-109 decision over DataTech in the battle for third and fifth places in the 10-team affair.

DataTech was knocked into the losers' bracket Saturday, dropping a 111-88 decision to Seattle Dynasties after opening with a 108-105 victory over Tacoma Pizza Hut.

Bob Need added 20 points for Brewster while other double-figure scores were recorded by Gene Broom (11) and Al Adam (10).

Brian McKenzie was the high gun for DataTech in the final game with 24 points. Dave Mulcahy added 23, Ken Shields chipped in 22 and Jim Duddridge hit for 20.

On Saturday, Bob Burrows and Mulcahy each scored 27 points to lead the victory over Tacoma. McKenzie added 21 and Duddridge contributed 15.

In the other game, Duddridge set the pace for Victoria with 20 points while Hall, McKenzie and Mulcahy each had 12.

Dynasties and Beck Associates, who play in the Northwest International League with Victoria and Renton, tangled in the championship final.

Escaping Celebrity Fuss, Bill Finds the Good Things

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Bill Rogers, seeking his first victory after four years on the pro golf tour, took a four-stroke lead Sunday after four rounds of the $225,000, 90-hole Bob Hope golf tournament.

Rogers shot a five-under par 67 at Eldorado, one of the four courses used in the tournament, to end 72 holes with a 270, matching the record-breaking score of Rik Messengale a year ago. Rogers would need a 67 in the final today to tie the record.

Jerry McGee, playing at La Quinta, shot a two-under-par 70 to end the four rounds with a 274 while Tom Watson, tied for the lead with Rogers Saturday, came in with a par 72 at host club Bermuda Dunes, to drop to five strokes behind.

Even though Rogers has never won a Professional Golfers' Association tour tournament, he took first place last fall in the Taiheiyo Masters in Japan. That gave him a $65,000 prize—$52,000 after the Japanese government deducted taxes—and a great deal of confidence going into this year.

"A lot of good things have happened to me this week," said Rogers, nicknamed the Panther by his former roommate at University of Houston, Bruce Lietzke, a two-time winner last year. "The right putts have gone in. People don't win tournaments unless you get some breaks."

The young Texan also said he was fortunate this year to play in a flight away from the so-called tour heavies; such as Watson, Lee Trevino, Arnold Palmer and Hubert Green, who were paired with the celebrities—including former-president Gerald R. Ford and comedian Flip Wilson.

"Personally, I used it to my advantage this week. Last year I was paired at the course with President Ford and the rest of the celebrities. You can let it bother you but you shouldn't let it.

"There are a lot of people, there is a lot of noise, a lot of things going on. And if you don't catch yourself, it can certainly bother you. This year, I didn't have to worry about it. It's almost like a relief, really. It's not that I don't enjoy crowds and people. Really, there just wasn't as much pressure playing at the various courses this week."

Seventy of the 128 pros made the cut for the final round, with 289 being the score that qualified a player into the fifth round at Bermuda Dunes.

Tim Simpson, a rookie on the tour last year, had a 68 at Indian Wells to put him at 277, seven strokes behind Rogers.

Veteran Gene Littler, who shot a 69 at Bermuda Dunes, and David Graham, the first-round leader who had a 70 at Indian Wells, were tied at 278.

Austin by One Despite Triple

MIAMI, Fla. (Reuter) — Debbie Austin of the United States recovered from a triple-bogey eight to win the American Cancer Society golf tournament by one stroke Sunday over Japan's Nayoko Yoshikawa and American Beth Solomon.

Austin held a five-stroke lead after 12 holes but played the next four holes in five over par. The near-disastrous eight occurred on the 16th hole when she duck-hooked a tee shot into the water and took three putts on the green.

Austin's winning total was a four-under-par 212 on the 6,255-yard Kendale Lakes Country Club. She won $7,500 from the total purse of $50,000.

Yoshikawa missed a five-foot putt on the final hole that would have sent it into a playoff. The 28-year-old Yoshikawa was playing in her first event since qualifying for the Ladies' Professional Golf Association LPGA tour two weeks ago.

Solomon's second-place finish was the best of her career.

Sandra Post, a former Canadian now living in Florida, won $540 with a final-round score of 73 for a 220 total. Dale Shaw of Victoria had an 82 in the final round for 232.

Blues 'Thanked' In Strange Way

Western Homes Buckaroos said "thanks" in a rather unusual way Sunday night during a South Island Big Six Hockey League game at Memorial Arena.

Buckaroos bounced Chemainus Blues 7-2 to move to within four points of second-place Victoria Athletics, whom the Blues had obligingly held to a 4-4 deadlock Saturday at Fuller Lake Arena.

Dave Pettinger scored three goals, two in the first and the lone one of the second, to spark the Buckaroo attack. Bob Nicholson added two and singles were fired by Dave Taylor and Normie Allen. Wade Smith and Joe Piper replied for the Blues, who trailed by period scores of 2-0 and 3-0.

Terry Graham came up with a strong game in goal for Buckaroos, making 33 saves. Vic Mali and Mike Carter, who came in near the end of the first period, combined to block 25 shots for Blues.

On Saturday, Jim Luck scored at 17:44 of the third period to pull out the tie for Blues after Dale Ewasiuk had sent Athletics ahead at the 17-minute mark.

Danny Peck led over-all scoring for Athletics with two first-period goals. Brian Preston scored the other Victoria goal. Brian Forbes, Craig Neeser and Peter Lemon supplied the other Chemainus markers.

Mali blocked 30 shots for Blues and Gord Mitchell made 28 saves in the Victoria net.

After years of paying rent, what have you got?

You've probably got lots of cancelled rent cheques. In fact, the closest you are to owning your own home is perhaps building a paper one. Think about it. Because with a Home Ownership Savings Plan you could be laying down the foundation for a real home, and saving on your income tax at the same time. Here's how it works:

A Home Ownership Savings Plan allows you to save up to $1,000 per year ($2,000 a year for a couple who are both income-earning), which could result in a couple saving up to $20,000, tax-free. Your contributions can be invested in one or a combination of three savings options detailed here.

1. Royal Bank HOSP Deposits. These are interest bearing deposits whose longterm nature make it possible to earn a higher rate of interest than on conventional savings deposits.

2. Income Fund. Here your contributions are used to purchase high yield bonds, deposit instruments and mortgages insured under the National Housing Act. This fund is actively managed on your behalf by professionals with the objective of maximizing income, while maintaining reasonable price stability and moderate capital appreciation.

3. Equity Fund. The objective of this fund is long term capital growth and reasonable income. Your contributions are invested mainly in the shares of Canadian companies. Again, the investment portfolio is managed by the same professionals managing the Income Fund.

Your Royal Bank manager can help you work out a solid plan. Why not call or visit today—before the March 1st deadline.

Flyer Pair Ailing

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bobby Clarke, the Philadelphia Flyers' star centre, suffered a fractured left thumb in last Thursday's 5-2 National Hockey League victory over Vancouver Canucks and will play for at least 10 days with a cast. Flyers also disclosed that winger Paul Holmgren will be out three to six weeks because of a fractured vertebra, also incurred in the Vancouver game.

Tough to Ignore UVic's Sparklers

Both Mike Gallo and Ken Shields, in charge of the basketballers at the University of Victoria, object to any suggestions that Vikettes and Vikings are one-person teams.

Try saying it and you're apt to get hit with a bench.

Both consistently emphasize bench strength but it is getting downright impossible to regard Carol Turney and Billy Loos as innocent bystanders.

Just as the Vikettes and Vikings have been the dominating forces in the Canada West University Athletic Association this season, Turney and Loos have stood apart as individuals.

The talented Turney has shattered CWUAA women's scoring records. When Carol tossed in 42 points in the Vikettes' 84-43 victory over Saskatchewan Huskiettes at the McKinnon Gymnasium Saturday, she became the first girl in CWUAA history to score 500 points in a single season.

Saturday's final point boosted Turney to the 500 mark and boosted her record per-game average to 27.8

With only two games remaining, in Lethbridge next weekend, both Turney and Loos have wrapped up individual scoring honors. Turney is almost 200 points ahead of her nearest rival while Loos is about 50 field goals ahead of his closest pursuer.

Loos pumped in 34 points as the Vikings downed the Huskies 96-55 and boosted his season's point total to 426 and an impressive 23.6 per-game average.

Vikettes' win was their 18th straight this season and 58th consecutive one in conference play.

While Vikettes have long since been assured of first place, the scramble for the second women's playoff berth will have to settled on the final weekend. Victoria's weekend sweep eliminated the Huskiettes but Calgary Dinnies and Alberta's Pandas, also sweeping weekend series, will have to go to the wire.

Calgary remained two points ahead of Alberta by defeating UBC Thunderettes 60-49 while the Pandas defeated Lethbridge 58-46 Saturday.

Alberta and the Dinnies wind up thier campaigns in Calgary next weekend.

UBC Thunderbirds served up a surprise by defeating Calgary's Dinosaurs 68-64 for the second straight night. Calgary is already assured of second place, behind the Vikings.

Slalom Triumph

CHAMONIX, France (AP) — Phil Mahre of White Pass, Wash., twice defeated Sweden's world champion Ingemar Stenmark and the rest of the world's ski elite Saturday to win the slalom of the Arlberg-Kandahar championship counting for the World Cup.

Driving through a snowstorm and bad visibility in both heats, Mahre—the only American starter in the slalom—beat the Swedish champion by an aggregate of more than 1½ seconds. Italy's Paolo Dechiesa was third, more than two seconds behind.

The 20-year-old Mahre had previously taken one third place and two fourth places in this year's World Cup slalom races. This victory gave him an additional 14 points but he remained in third place behind Stenmark and Austria's Klaus Heidegger.

Nixon Unecessarily Rude To Canada Says Ex-Envoy

By KEN POLE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Canadian-American relations during the Nixon years evidently were worse than most people realized, according to a former United States ambassador to Ottawa.

William J. Porter, now retired and living in Westport Point, Mass., was posted to Canada from March 8, 1974 to Dec. 20, 1975. In a letter to Washington Post, published Thursday and made available here Friday, Porter lays bare at least some of the intrigue that went on while Richard Nixon was president and Henry Kissinger his foreign affairs policy architect.

"When Kissinger became secretary of state, he was asked by the Canadians to visit Ottawa," the former ambassador recounts. "He promised three times that he would, but he didn't until he first administered a diplomatic slap to them by visitimg Montreal before paying his respects in Ottawa." He says the Nixon administration was unnecessarily rude to Canada and praises Prime Minister Trudeau for taking it all in stride, even the expletives with which Nixon used to describe Trudeau.

"Needless to say, such goings-on made the ambassador's life rather difficult, but most Canadians generously showed understanding of my problems."

Porter takes pains in his letter to comment favorably on the improved state of Canada-U.S. relations since Jimmy Carter took office and appointed Zbigniew Brzezinski and Cyrus Vance to replace Kissinger.

"The Carter administration, often chastised these days, deserves full credit for this most important achievement."

An indication of how warm relations now are was a remark by U.S. Vice-President Walter Mondale, during a visit here last month. He said Trudeau is "a priceless asset to the industrialized world" and a man who could impart "wisdom and understanding" in world affairs to Americans who meet him for talks.

Cheap Fee In Costly Ad

TORONTO (CP) — A $410,000 federal advertising campaign to promote the hiring of students is having trouble finding two students to pose for a $25 photography fee.

The advertising campaign is part of the federal ministry of employment and immigration's $96.2-million program to create summer jobs for students and encourage the private sector to hire students.

Maureen McChesney, chosen this week to be a candidate for one of two student spots in the billboard campaign, said Friday the fee is low.

"I guess in comparison to the cost of the campaign, it is low, especially when they say this billboard is going to be all across Canada," said Miss McChesney, 20, a first-year student at the Ontario College of Art.

A photography session was cancelled Friday because a second student, Brian Waters, 19, and his agent said the lowest fee they would consider for the shooting was $400.

"It's hypocritical of the federal government to tell businesses and small companies to hire students and give them a break, while taking two students whose faces will be plastered across Canada and not giving them a decent amount of money," said Penny Noble, agent for Waters, who is also a part-time model.

Barry Ashley, hired to find the students and take their pictures, said he is looking for another student who does not have an agent and is not involved in professional modelling.

He said the photography session would take less than an hour and the $25 hourly rate he was offering the students is the going rate for beginner models.

"I set the fee and I think it's fair," Ashley said. "To me, it's better to work for $25 than not to work for $400.

Police Bugs Praised

OTTAWA (CP) — Police wiretaps backed by court authorization are averaging about 600 a year and are resulting in a high rate of arrests, the solicitor-general's department says in its annual report to Parliament.

The report, released Friday, covers electronic surveillance activities by the RCMP and municipal police forces since the 1974 Privacy Act was passed authorizing wiretaps under certain contitions.

"The ratio of numbers of persons arrested per each authorized use of wiretaps is 2.5-3.0 persons which, measured against normal police investigative averages, is high," the report says.

The department also released a report showing the RCMP obtained 471 warrants authorizing legal wiretaps in the interests of national security last year, compared with 517 in 1976.

RATES TOO HIGH

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Dick Callaghan, a spokesman for independent truck loggers, says truckers are considering group insurance for their vehicles because of stiff increases in Insurance Corp. of British Columbia rates.

Callaghan, manager of the B.C. Independent Truck Loggers Association, said Friday his organization has been approched by several insurance companies proposing group insurance for association members. He said southern Interior members will be asked if they want the idea pursued.

ICBC, the Crown insurance corporation, is increasing basic premiums for southern Interior truck loggers to $643 a year from $288. The corporation has said claims from logging truck drivers last year amounted to $1.8 million — more than double the premiums collected.

Ottawa Opposes Waterton Cutting

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — The federal government is arguing against a proposal to log an area adjacent to Waterton Lakes National Park next summer.

In a telegram to the British Columbia government, Hugh Faulkner, federal minster in charge of national parks, said the Akamina-Kishinena area is valuable wilderness and should be left untouched.

Joe O'Brien, an assistant to Faulkner, confirmed Friday that the message was sent to the province's environment minister.

"Mr. Faulkner pointed out that the area is a valuable wilderness and lent support to the conservation side of the arguament," said O'Brien.

The British Columbia forest service is planning a 20,000-acre logging operation just west of Waterton to salvage timber recently killed by pine beetles.

Waterton lake park officials have argued against the proposal, saying it will seriously affect park aesthetics and wildlife.

Marijuana Law Change Urged

The criminal justice committee of the Victoria Bar Association has voted overwhelmingly in favor of decriminalizing Canada's marijuana laws.

The comittee has asked the B.C. branch of the Canadian Bar Association to urge the national body to take the same position.

At a meeting this week members endorsed a resolution calling for decriminalization of simple possession of marijuana, as well as cultivation of marijuana for one's own use and the non-profit transfer of small amounts between users.

The resolution followed a submission to the committee by representatives of the National Organization for Reform of Marijuana Laws in Canada (NORML).

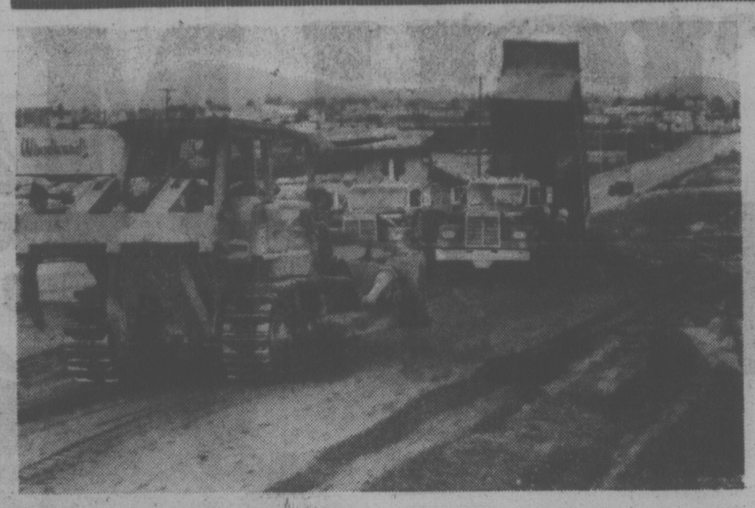
None of the committee members opposed the resolution. There were 19 votes in favor and three abstentions.

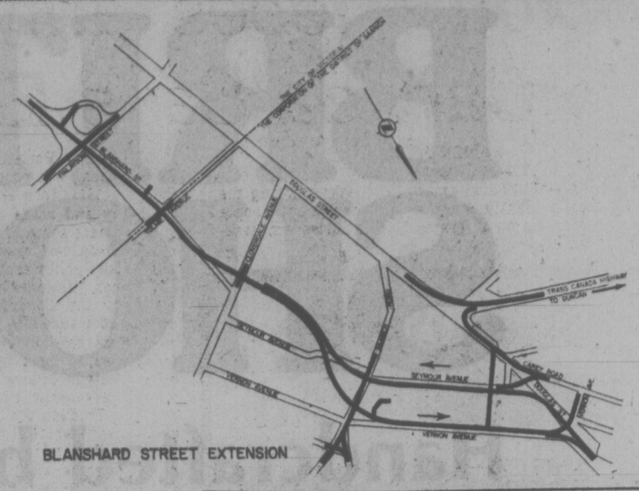
The Victoria committee is the third to endorse the move. The Vancouver and New Westminster criminal justice committees approved the resolution earlier in the year.

UVic law professor Gerry Ferguson, chairman of the local committee, said Friday that by urging decriminalization the legal profession is not endorsing a move to legalize the drug.

Rather the lawyers want certain sections of the marijuana laws taken out of the Narcotic Control Act and placed under the Food and Drug Act. Simple possession of any drug listed under the FDA is not an offence, although trafficking is.

"We still feel there has to be some control over marijuana use," Ferguson said. "We want to discourage its use."





Road to Nowhere No More

Blanshard, traditionally tagged the highway to nowhere, is steadily becoming a road to somewhere, even if motorists can't quite appreciate the fact right now as they thread their way through temporary barriers and along diversion routes.

Illustrated on the sketch plan, right, is the one-and-a-half-mile extension to link up with the Patricia Bay Highway north of the Vernon Avenue intersection.

The new artery will split just north of Cloverdale, with the realigned Seymour and Vernon each three lanes wide and designed exclusively for one-way traffic: Seymour southbound and Vernon northbound.

Total cost (including about $2 million for right of way acquisition) is around $8 million and the project — now running to schedule — is due for completion by late 1979.

The contractor is H.B. Construction of Surrey, which is also engaged in the $7.3 million job of widening the Trans-Canada Highway to four lanes between the Town and Country shopping centre and the Thetis Lake overpass.

That project is slated for completion this fall.

Eventually, Victoria-bound traffic on the Pat Bay Highway will not be able to go much farther than the Saanich municipal complex before turning off on Seymour.

Similarly, northbound traffic on Douglas will not be able to link up with the Pat Bay. At the Town and Country intersection the only way it will be able to proceed is via the Trans-Canada.

Mayor On Trust Board

Mayor Mike Young and architectural historian Martin Segger have been named to the new B.C. Heritage Trust, Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf said Friday.

They will join already-named trust chairman J. V. Clyne and a third director Lawrence Killam, a Vancouver realtor.

The objects of the heritage trust are to support, encourage and facilitate the conservation and maintenance and restoration of heritage property in the province.

Segger is on the B.C. Heritage Trust, director of the University of Victoria's Maltwood Museum and chairman of Victoria's heritage advisory committee.

Young has been active in heritage preservation. Bawlf said more appointments to the board will be made later.

Fighting Chinaman Committed for Trial

DELTA (CP) — Chung Chuck, the 82-year-old millionaire potato farmer who calls himself The Fighting Chinaman, Friday was committed for trial on two charges stemming from an incident last Aug. 10.

He was represented by two lawyers in the preliminary hearing arising from the standoff with Delta police and municipal officials who had tried to shut off the water supply to houseboat owners renting waterfront space from him.

The charges are pointing a firearm and possessing a weapon for a purpose dangerous to the public peace.

A third count of possessing an imitation weapon for a purpose dangerous to the public peace was dismissed by Judge J. R. Groberman.

Chuck arrived in provincial court with an armload of lawbooks and a cheering section made up of his houseboating tenants.

He elected jury trial in B.C. Supreme Court, a trial that will be held in New Westminster at a date yet to be set.

Jack Parry, Delta's deputy director of engineering services, told the court of returning to Chuck's property on the afternoon of Aug. 10 — after talking to Chuck earlier in the day regarding the water matter — and seeing Chuck running out the door of his house with what appeared to be a gun in his hand.

Parry said he saw Chuck shouting at the top of his voice, waving what appeared to be a gun and "pointing it in our direction."

In cross-examination by Chuck lawyer Allan Thackray, Parry said that several hours later the standoff ended with an agreement that the municipality wouldn't cut off the water and he agreed that the water is flowing to this day.

Nor was Chuck in arrears in any way, Parry agreed, because "up to the date of the incident Chuck had never been presented with a bill by the municipality."

"But you were going to cut the water off," Thackray observed.

Police inspector Dave Ennis said that when he arrived on the scene Chuck said he would kill him if he came any closer. He said Chuck was holding what appeared to be a 12-gauge pump-action shotgun which had a trigger mechanism with Chuck's finger on it.

Thackray said that there was no fear for the safety of the public in the incident and that Chuck was simply "protecting his property from illegal invasion."

Chuck's reputation as a battler goes back to the 1940s and into the 1950s when he fought with the Coast Vegetable Marketing Board.

Cadillac In Court

VANCOUVER (CP) — When Valerie Morrow brought herself a brand-new, air-conditioned, front-wheel drive, yellow Cadillac Eldorado, she wasn't expecting the $15,020.52 car to drive her to a court suit against General Motors of Canada.

She filed a British Columbia Supreme Court writ on her own behalf Friday claiming return of the purchase price, $15,020.52, plus $5,000.

She claims in her writ that the reverse gear works when the lever is in neutral position and that she "feared for her life."

No One's Sure Why Massage Eases Pain

New York Times

NEW YORK — When something hurts, you rub it. No one knows exactly why it works, but the touch of the hand often eases pain.

According to professional masseurs, it also improves blood circulation, relieves fatigue, soothes the nervous system, helps the body rid itself of poisons and relaxes tight muscles and aching backs and necks. Oriental massage techniques are said by their practitioners to cure some chronic ailments, improve the functioning of particular organs and help balance the body's energy.

Whatever the medical claims, a massage from a properly trained practitioner can't do any harm, and it almost always feels good.

Doctors aren't certain why massage relieves pain, but there are several theories. Anxiety can increase pain, and massage, by putting people in a relaxed moods, can diminish anxiety. Tight muscles can compresss and irritate nerve fibres that carry pain signals to the brain; massage can loosen tight muscles. Massage also provides a "physiological distraction."

"If you bombard the central nervous system with impulses from the periphery, like massage, you can interfere with other impulses in the system, like pain," said Dr. Louis Lasagna, an anesthesiologist at the University of Rochester Medical Centre.

Those in the legitimate massage business say their craft has been tainted recently by bad publicity given to "massage" parlors. Still there is no doubt that massage is becoming an increasingly accepted way of dealing with aches and pains.

There are two main forms of massage: Swedish massage, which is basically stroking, and Japanese massage — or shiatsu — which literally means finger pressure. Swedish massage, invented in 1812 by Peter Henrik Ling, is a body rub based on five basic movements: effleurage, or long, gliding strokes; petrissage, or kneading individual muscles; tapotement, a persuccive movement to stimulate the nervous system; friction, a rolling movement of the fingers, and vibration, or placing the hand on a body part and vibrating it.

Shiatsu is a form healing brought from China to Japan in the sixth century, and it continues to be a major therapy in Japan. The shiatsu technique is, simply put, applying pressure with the thumbs and fingers to the tsubos — pressure points — to release stagnated energy.

A prevailing theory holds that shiatsu massages may be painful at first, while Swedish massages are usually soothing. But Wataru Ohashi says shiatsu should be painless. Ohashi, founder of the Shiatsu Education Centre in New York, says many Japanese health clubs offer fake "shiatsu" massage that involve painful poking with the fingers and jumping on the spine, which can be harmful.

Ohashi, author of an illustrated book called Do-It-Yourself Shiatsu (E. P. Dutton, $5.95), has done shiatsu for the American Ballet Theatre company, Martha Graham and the Japanese Embassy.

"In Japan people practice shiatsu on themselves and friends and family members," he said. "it's preventative medicine. We believe that the worst doctor can deal with symptoms; the better doctor can prevent them."

Contest Picks Career Women

elizabeth forbes

Victoria Business and Professional Women's Club has two important projects on its calendar in the next few weeks.

Both are planned with careers for women in mind. One is a young career women's competition and the other a women's career exposition.

In each case they are repeats of projects sponsored by the BPW Club in recent years.

"They were so successful and brought us so much praise from the public," president Joan Currie says, "we decided to present them again."

The First — A Young Career Woman Contest, Mrs. Currie explained, is planned "to recognize the contribution young women in business and the professions are making in the economic, political, social, cultural and spiritual life of Victoria and vicinity."

Various organizations were asked to sponsor eligible young women for the contest.

Four groups responded — Zeta Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi Sorority; the YM-YWCA; the local chapter of the National Secretaries Association and Arbutus Toastmistress Club.

Contestants, all between the ages of 18 and 26, are Wendalyn Jones, a supervisor in the provincial sales tax office; Bertha Willing, secretary to the Victoria City lands commissioner; Shainaz Damji, assistant editor of publications with the provincial department of mines and petroleum resources and Andrea Pite, a second year university science student.

A panel of three judges, Mrs. C. C. Warren of the Downtown Victoria Association, Mrs. Shirley Baker, University of Victoria and Mrs. E. C. DeVilliers, first viceprsident, University Women's Club of Victoria, met and talked to the contestants at an informal reception on Sunday at the Caen Street home of Mable Dean, a past president of the Victoria BPW Club.

They will also review personal fact sheets, the young woman submitted.

"Then comes the final judging," Joan Currie says.

"It will take place at a special meeting in Carnarvon Park Hall, off Henderson Road, next Friday, commencing at 8 p.m., and we hope the public will attend and support these young women. There is no admission charge."

There the contestants will each give a short prepared speech on "Today's Woman Preparing For Tomorrow", and then Victoria's Young career woman for 1978, will be announced.

The successful candidate will be entered in a provincial competition scheduled to take place at the annual conference of British Columbia and Yukon business and Professions Women's Clubs, in Kamloops, on the holiday weekend in May.

Winner there will go to the national finals at the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs biennial convention at Moncton, New Brunswick, in mid-July.

This contest, under auspices of the CFBPWC has been held, country-wide, every two years since 1970.

"The first time Victoria Club entered, in 1974," Joan Currie says with some pride, "Judy Robbins, now Mrs. Garry Johnston and a member of our club, won the national crown.

"This year, we're looking for another win!"

The Exposition — You will remember the Women's Career Exposition (WEXPO) sponsored by the Victoria BPW Club in the Empress Hotel, last April.

In arranging it the club decided that if companies and industries could mount a Trade Fair annually, surely there was a way to present something of a similar nature to show the many careers in business, professions and in industry, open to women in this present day and age.

Club members co-operated. They also passed the word on to heads of various firms and companies in the area.

Result?

When the Exposition opened, some 50 booths were set up and manned by people prepared to answer questions and give advice on the various career possibilities.

Now it has been decided to hold a second Women's Career Exposition on Sunday, March 19, in the Crystal Ballroom at the Empress Hotel, between 1 p.m. and 4 p.m.

WEXPO 2 will again present tables with information on careers for women, many of them non-traditional.

It will be of particular interest to students making plans for the future, to women entering the work force for a first time and to those returning after an absence from gainful employment.

There will be an admission charge for adults, reduced by half for students and pensioners.

Some of the careers already assured include pharmicist, lawyer, accountant, physician, veterinarian, nurse, banker, sales people and carpenters.

Further information may be obtained from Suzanne Bircher, who is head of the planning committee, phone 383-4604, or Marian Buller, 477-6254.

Food Appeal

PARIS (CP) — Canadian Agricultural Minister Eugene Whelan has appealed to his colleagues from 24 countries for more equitable distribution of food to the world community. Whelan told the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) last week that despite today's developments in communications and interdependence between countries, his impression is that little is done to improve world food distribution.

Invisible Wallpaper Patch

hand around the house

By A. J. HAND

Patching holes in wallpaper is easy with a special technique called the torn-patch method. Here's how to do it:

Round up some wallpaper of the same pattern as the paper you want to patch. You may have some leftover paper squirrelled away in a closet somewhere. If not, you'll have to get some at a wallpaper shop. If the paper isn't the new pre-pasted type you'll also need some wallpaper paste. Pick it up at the shop when you buy your paper.

The whole secret to the torn-patch technique is in tearing out the patch. If you do the tearing right, you'll end up with a patch that has feathered edges. These will paste down smoothly over your existing wallpaper. As a result the patch will all but disappear. If you were to cut the patch out with a knife or scissors it wouldn't have these feathered edges and would be much more obvious.

Look at the sketch and you'll see how the tearing is done. Hold a scrap of wallpaper as shown and move your hand as indicated by the arrows. Tear the patch out of the scrap with a slow careful motion, almost as if you were peeling the patch up off the table.

The object is to create a patch with its face intact, and with the feathering on the back. This may take a little practice, but keep at it until you get it right. Try to make a patch that completely covers the damaged area with a small margin all around. Don't worry that the patch is irregular in shape. That makes it just that much harder to spot, like the irregular blotches of color in a camouflage paint job.

Once the patch is cut, you are ready to paste it down. If you are using prepasted paper, just wet it. Shake off excess water and position the patch carefully so it matches up with the pattern of the paper already on the wall.

If the patch is not prepasted, use an artist's brush to apply a thin coat of paste to the back. All brush strokes should run from the centre of the patch towards the edges. This prevents any wrinkling or damage to the delicate feather edges.

Once the patch is positioned, press it down lightly with your hand. If there are any bubbles under the patch smooth them away by stroking lightly with your fingers. Again, always stroke from the centre towards the edges. That's it.

Note: the torn-patch technique won't work with foil-faced wallpapers, or those made of vinyl. They won't tear properly. And it's not ideal for patching holes over a couple of inches across. There's a different technique for those situations.

RATS NEEDED TO TEST POISON

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Biologist Gary Rothpletz says he has developed a new rat poison—but he can't find enough rats to test it.

He said he hopes to find at least one home, barn or shed in the Spokane or Portland, Ore., areas where rats are a problem so he can test the new product, called TALON. The poison thins the blood of the rodents and causes internal hemmorhaging and eventual death.

William Senske, owner of a local pest control company, said he will test the poison if rats can be found.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I think this women's lib thing has been carried too far. When I took my children (ages 2 and 3) to see Santa at our local department store, we found that "Santa" was a woman!

She was dressed in a regular Santa Claus outfit — only "Santa" had long dark hair hanging to her shoulders, and she wore lipstick and eye makeup, too. "Santa" spoke to the children in her normal feminine voice, making no effort whatsoever to come across as the jolly, bearded, white-haired old man the kids had expected to see.

The kids were confused and I was shocked. Abby, I'm all for employing women if they can do the job as well as men, but a lady Santa Claus!!!! I think that was unreal.

What do you think? HORRIFIED.

DEAR HORRIFIED: I agree. Santa is just not a lady's bag.

DEAR ABBY: Five months ago I gave my father a gift certificate to a massage parlor for his 55th birthday. Since many months had passed and he had not used it, I wondered why.

Then a letter appeared in your column from HURT WIFE, asking why a churchgoing, happily married man would visit a massage parlor. You offered a number of reasons? "Curiosity, lust, an itch for variety, fear of missing something, temporary insanity . . . etc."

I gave my father a gift certificate to a massage parlor for a perfectly legitimate reason — to treat him to a relaxing massage. The fact that he has not yet taken advantage of it, I attribute to prejudgments such as yours. I think you owe all legitimate masseurs and masseuses an apology. HURT SON

DEAR SON: And to them I apologize. But my judgment about massage parlors is based on the fact that literally thousands of dubious massage parlors have sprung up in recent years. And the massages (unlike beauty) offered there are more than skin deep.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 24 and very much in love with a 21-year-old woman. Last week I asked her to marry me. Then she said she thought I should know that she had been to bed with four men whom she identified. (Two are in our social circle.)

I appreciate her honesty, but I don't know whether I can ever forgive her. Every time I look at her now I think of those other men.

I'm not worried about trusting her, because she says she loves me and has turned off all thoughts of other men, and I know she's sincere. But I am not sure I can ever be happy with her knowing what I know.

I have never been intimate with a girl. Should I go ahead and marry her and try my best to quit holding her past against her? — OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: Don't marry her until you no longer hold her past against her. A person's past experiences (good and bad) make them what they are, so if you "love" her, accept her, past and all, without being judgmental.

(P.S. Be honest with her about your feelings. She may not want to marry YOU, knowing how YOU feel.)

DEAR ABBY: Maybe YOU think it's "gracious" for guests to telephone the hostess the next day or write a note to thank her, but I disagree.

If a guest ducks out of a very large party without saying goodbye because he or she doesn't want to start an exodus (or say goodbye to 100 people), then a note or a call to the hostess the next day would naturally take the place of what wasn't said in person.

But when guests leave my home and say they enjoyed being there, that's sufficient for me; and I don't want them phoning me the next day to repeat what they have already said.

If there is something to discuss, well and good, or if they had an exceptionally good time a written note is welcome, but I think perfunctory phone calls after a party are a nuisance and a thing of the past.

Am I alone in this? Please ask your readers to express their views. — WONDERING.

DEAR WONDERING: Readers? Is a phone call phoney? Or is it right to write?

CONFIDENTIAL TO "LOST FAITH": Perhaps a lesson in "faith" can be best illustrated in this way:

A mother had just received word that her only son — a bright, handsome young man of 22 — had been killed in the war. Her pastor tried vainly to console her in her grief. "Where was your God when my only son was killed?" she cried. "The same place He was when HIS only son was killed," the pastor quietly replied.

If you love art, try to plan a visit to Austria. There you can see, for instance, the oldest piece of sculpture in Europe, the Venus of Willendorf. This is a limestone statuette which dates back to 30,000 B.C. You will also be able to admire the world's biggest collections of drawings by Albrecht Durer and paintings by Pieter Brueghel. Furthermore, you can see the 10th century Imperial Crown of the Holy Roman Empire, Gothic winged altarpieces, Baroque palaces, romantic old towns and a host of other unique sights.

The gorgeous 10-page color brochure, Art in Austria — Museums and Art Treasures, pictures quite a few of Austria's priceless art treasures. It also offers a list of hundreds of worthwhile museums and collections and tells you where these are located, what they contain and when they are open. The list shows that the wealth of Austrian art is by no means confined only to the large towns and cities, but that it is scattered all over the country.

In addition, the brochure contains a brief history of Austrian art starting at 1,500 B.C. and bringing you up-to-date with Austria's best known contemporary painters, graphic artists and architects.

This publication is sure to make you want to see for yourself how much Austria has to offer art lovers.

The Harman Kardon Receivers

Listening to any of the Harman Kardon receivers will reveal that in all but absolute power, they are the sonic equals of any component system.

The 330c is the latest in a series of receivers that is the most popular in the world. Despite its modest cost, it boasts sufficient power for any type of loudspeaker. The 430 and the 730 feature twin power (a separate power supply for each channel), so that no matter how much energy is called for, the performance of one channel is not affected by the other. Dynamic musical passages are reproduced full and unconstrained. The 730 incorporates a patented Quieting Meter that measures actual signal-to-noise ratio so that the receiver can be tuned to the precise point where the signal is purest.

All Harman Kardon receivers are engineered for ease of operation and include a wide range of inputs and outputs. All are constructed by computer-aided means and precision, phase-linearity and ultra-low distortion are assured by...

The 400 Series Components

The specifications of the A401 integrated amplifier are shared only by the most exceptional separate components. It is rated at 25 watts per channel over the full frequency bandwidth (20Hz to 20kHz) at less than 0.5 percent THD, rise time of less than 5 microseconds, and square wave tilt less than 5 degrees; the A401 possesses superb sonic characteristics. It features tape monitor facilities, multiple speaker capability, flexible bass and treble controls, low-cut filter, and connections for two pairs of stereo headphones.

The A402 integrated amplifier incorporates two separate power supplies (one for each channel) so that the energy drawn by one channel will not affect the other. Its LED display provides a continuous reading of power output that is faster and more accurate than meters. Complete tape monitoring is provided for two tape recorders, thus you can even make tape copies while listening to a new-to-you program source. Twin power supplies, an ultra-wide frequency response and low distortion are only some of the reasons the A402 is a superb amplifier.

The T403 tuner was designed for optimum phase linearity and ultra-low distortion. Its circuitry for incoming signals is completed by FM detectors directly into harmonic and intermodulation distortion. The T403 is sensitive, selective, and unusually quiet (signal-to-noise ratio is better than—70dB). The unconventional meter combines signal-strength and centre-of-channel tuning in a single integrated reading that is more precise and easier to read than separate meters. The T403's features, unusual in its price range, include adjustable muting, variable output level, and 75 ohm (including coaxial) and 300 ohm antenna inputs. It is a flexible tuner that makes an excellent component for any high quality system.

ST-8 and ST-7 Turntables

The ST-8 and ST-7 are straight line tracking turntables. The stylus follows the original path cut into the master record. The result is the end of tracking error and the distortion that such error generates — tracking is as perfect as the finest cartridge will allow in the finest possible stylus forces. Because the entire tonearm moves across the disc, the stylus no longer "skates" — eliminating the audible distortion and uneven record wear that characterize even the best pivoted tonearms.

The ST-7 is designed for the music lover who must have the very best. It incorporates variable speed adjustment and a luxurious touch button control system.

The ST-8 makes straight line tracking available to a wider audience, without compromising performance. It costs little more than a deluxe turntable of conventional design.

HK2000 Cassette Deck

The HK2000 cassette deck is an instrument that reflects major advances in the state of the art. It employs a tape transport system that reduces wow and flutter to below 0.07 percent. It features a super-hard permalloy head that provides exceptionally wide and linear frequency response, provision for switching out the noise reduction to allow utilization of the full frequency bandwidth, microphone and line level indicators, a memory switch, Dolby* noise reduction with adjustment controls, and switchable compensation for different kinds of tape. The HK2000 was evaluated by the prestigious British journal, Gramophone: "... remarkable ... the HK2000 ... has established a new performance level against which other machines will tend to be judged in the future. ..." The Harman Kardon HK2000 should finally close the argument as to whether or not the compact cassette is capable of high fidelity performance.

Citation Components

Citation components came remarkably close to the ideal "straight wire with gain".

The Citation 18s power amplifier delivers the clean, neutral power required to drive dynamic loudspeakers. Its design reflects new understandings about the specific forms of distortion responsible for the audible differences that veer among power amplifiers with otherwise similar specifications. The Citation 18a features twin power, output level controls, and an LED display that indicates dynamic range and power level more quickly and accurately than meters.

The Citation 18a offers, at a significant reduction in cost, all of the power and stability of the Citation 18s. It is a "no frills" component with a simple, black exterior that reflects its function: a rugged, professional power amplifier.

The Citation 18 shares all of the superior sonic characteristics of the Citation 18 series amplifiers. Its extremely fast response and wide frequency bandwidth result in detailed reproduction and outstanding handling of transients. The neutral and unusually open and transparent sonic character of the amplifiers assures natural depth and precise localization of voices and instruments. The Citation 18 features illuminated channel indicators, a switch for mono/stereo operation, and a fast, precise LED display with two sensitivity ranges.

All Citation power amplifiers are twin powered. Two separate power supplies exist for each channel, ensuring that no matter how much energy is called for during dynamic music passages, performance of one channel will not be affected by the other. When measured by the criteria that most accurately predict musical results — square wave response, rise time, and slew rate — Citation amplifiers are without peer.

The Citation 17 preamplifier features extremely wide frequency response, superb square wave performance, and an exceptional phase response. It employs an active audio equalizer that offers "shelves" instead of "points" and offers almost unlimited control over program material. Room acoustics, and loudspeaker response. It includes a true, stepped volume control calibrated in 32 separate resistance-level panel, similar switching, two headphone jacks, active filters, a multiplicity of inputs and outputs, and separate tape dubbing circuitry.

The Citation 17s is a modestly priced version of the Citation 17 and possesses the same sonic characteristics. It has all the basic features necessary for accurate reproduction including a stepped volume control, active filters, and complete tape monitoring and dubbing facilities.

The Citation 18 tuner provides stereo reception of unusually musical accuracy. Its sonics is as impressive as its specifications. The unusual muting system prevents compensation for any prevailing reception conditions. A series of tiny dial pit reveal only clear, noise-free stations, but the tuner can be adjusted to receive weaker stations if desired.

The Citation Receiver

The Citation Receiver is a contemporary expression of the legendary Citation sonic characteristics. It combines the finest features of preamplifier and power amplifier sections, incorporating the most advanced electronic technology. It is styled and packaged with the consummate care, from the brushed rosewood expanse of its top panel to the graceful inlaying of its side panels.

The Citation Receiver possesses the power, control, and sensitivity of the legendary Citation seperate components in a single convenient format. Its special features include luxurious electronic touch controls, dual dial scales for ease of tuning from any position, complete monitoring and dubbing facilities for two recorders, and two Citation hallmarks of wide frequency, superb square wave response, and great linearity. It is designed and engineered to give a lifetime of use and musical pleasure.

Con Men Make Hay While the Sun Shines

By ANTHONY J. PARISI
New York Times

NEW YORK — There is something inexplicably appealing about solar energy. Like the sun itself, it draws worshipers. Never mind that it may still cost more than oil or even electricity, solar energy strikes a lot of its supporters as the real way to bring power to the people. Exxon doesn't own it. The department of energy can't regulate it.

Indeed, some communes of the 1960s have given way to alternate energy lifestyle settlements whose inhabitants plan to make solar power, not war.

Unfortunately, con men flourish when such ingenuousness prevails. Today, peddlers of solar junk abound. They prey equally on idealists anxious to cut their ties with the establishment and on citizen tyros desperate to cut their fuel bills. Worst of all they blacken the names of legitimate solar energy companies in an embryonic industry where the struggling garage inventor and basement manufacturer are still the rule.

Peddlers of solar junk abound, preying equally on idealists anxious to cut their ties with the establishment and citizen tyros desperate to cut their fuel bills.

Worst of all, they blacken the names of legitimate solar energy companies in an embryonic industry.

That's why the Solar Age Catalog and books like it are so important: They try to enlighten the naive while spurring the jaded.

Published by the same company that puts out Solar Age magazine, the paperback Solar Age Catalog (Solar-Vision Inc.; $8.50) cuts a path between the plethora of solar product directories on the one side and the raft of solar design manuals on the other. It offers a little bit of both types, plus some.

In the process, it manages to capture some of the engaging spirit of sociopolitical commitment that binds the growing solar energy community. A how-to article on building a greenhouse is billed, "With a Little Help From Your Friends." A light-veined (yet deadly serious) vignette, "59 Ways to Save Energy," has this passage: "Silent clashes of battle draw my attention to the window: fierce combat as B.T.U.s muster thousands of successful charges out through the leak around the cold steel sash."

The catalogue starts with several introductory articles that explain the various approaches to solar energy. It then moves on to more technical treatises of solar energy subsystems, such as heat exchangers and heat pumps. It also has a series of articles on picking complete solar systems: "Choosing a Water Heater," for example, or "Swimming Pool Heaters: Answers to Practical Questions."

Along the way it lists manufacturers of components and systems, and includes enough data tables and efficiency curves to make any tinkerer happy. It even has a reading list for those who find that 232 pages on solar energy is simply not enough.

The Solar Age Catalog is not without shortcomings. Its eclectic approach sometimes gives the reader the impression that the contents were hastily thrown together. Many of the articles, in fact, are reprints from other publications, and the book lacks a sense of continuity as a result. This is not a tightly edited publication.

At the very least, however, the catalogue is a responsible starter for those who want a solar system of their own. If you are serious about building or purchasing a solar energy installation and don't know where to start, you'll probably want this book. If you're not serious, but curious about what can and cannot be done with solar energy, you will also find it interesting.

Cosy Kitchen Design

By PAULINE GRAVES

Each new idea introduced has been copied, changed and adapted, and the adaptations in turn copied and changed.

The snack bar, for instance, has stayed with us a long time because it serves a logical purpose, that of separating areas, most particularly kitchen and family room. But prior to open plans and family room-kitchens, no-one thought of a snack bar. The need didn't exist. However, it is with us today and here to stay, apparently, usually as a high, straight counter. And this is where the refinements come in.

Shown here is a snack bar, but with a difference. The difference is the round area at the end, 4-feet wide. Not only is the curve eye-pleasing, but it is practical. For once, several people can sit at the snack bar, facing or partially facing each other, instead of lining up, ear to ear as at a lunch counter. The wide 16-inch overhang allows plenty of knee room for comfortable seating, as does the 37-inch height.

Curved snack bar lets people face each other

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

DEAR DR. MILLER: We're buying a camper truck with plans for an extended vacation this summer. The biggest hitch in our plans to date is our cat, Tonka. We want to take him with us. He's very dependent on us, and he loves to ride in the car anyway. Besides I can't imagine him surviving several months being boarded out somewhere. Friends who've tripped say not to take him. It would be a disaster. Is this necessarily so?—L.G.

DEAR L.G.: Definitely not. Numerous cats and dogs take and enjoy such trips. Since Tonka's touring around already, the transition should be relatively smooth. You should keep him leashed, provide suitable sanitary facilities, and arrange to maintain water and food schedules at as near normal as possible. (Gastro-intestinal upsets, for example, are most likely to occur with a sudden change of food or water.) Vaccinations should be up to date, including, in this case, rabies. A health certificate just before you and Tonka take off is advisable.

Even after a good night's sleep I find that I get drowsy in the mid-morning, and sometimes in the latter part of the afternoon. Are there any drugs that I can take to pick me up?—Mr. T. McM.

Dear Mr. McM.:

A warm, poorly ventilated room with excess humidity can produce a sense of drowsiness. Drugs, of course, especially the antihistamines, can have the same effect.

People with relatively low blood pressure and low blood sugar may have a sense of lethargy such as you describe. Factory workers who inhale even small quantities of fumes may also feel a sense of enervating sleepiness.

There are a number of medical and neurological conditions that can also be responsible for unusual drowsiness. These can be ruled out by specialized examiniations.

Drugs are not the answer to your problem. They would only compound your difficulties.

Taking the Oath

New citizens swear their oath of allegiance to Canada at ceremony in Victoria's citizenship court. They are just a few of the growing number of new Canadians granted citizenship every week. Recent changes to federal Citizenship Act, reducing age limits from 21 to 18 and dropping residency qualifications from five to three years, have tripled swearing-in ceremonies.

HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS PAPER MILLIONAIRES

TORONTO (CP) — Five high-school students. all girls, played the stock market for 12 weeks and turned $100,000 into almost $1 million — at least on paper.

Under a program sponsored for the last eight years by Wilfrid Laurier University in Waterloo, the girls made hypothetical investments and a computer at the university kept track of their transactions.

GOLDEN AGE ON THE WAY IN HUNT FOR SPACE LIFE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Revolutionary new astronomy equipment coming into use should find any existing planets among the sun's neighboring stars before the end of the century, a prominent astronomer said Sunday.

Predicting a new golden age for astronomy, Dr. Frank Drake of Cornell University, said the science has reached a stage where it can start addressing the basic questions that have been asked for centuries.

What is the origin of the universe? Are there planetary systems other than our own? Is there life on some of these planets and elsewhere in the universe?

Drake, director of the world's largest radio telescope at Arecibo, Puerto Rico, said existing ground-based equipment and the new orbiting Space Telescope, to be launced in 1983, will be able to detect earth-sized planets around the nearest 40 stars.

Other equipment coming into use will extend that range to about 400 stars within 30 light years of the Sun. A light year is the distance light, moving at 297,600 kilometres (186,000 miles) a second, travels in a year.

"I think the chances of finding planets among the stars are 100 per cent by the year 2000," Drake told a news coonference at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Drake also said new scientific talent as well as equipment will contribute to this explosion of knowledge.

"Ninety per cent of all the atronomers in history are alive today, and they are young and more highly trained than ever," he said.

Drake said scientists looking for the best way to find life elsewhere will issue a report this week concluding that the best method is listening for radio transmissions from other civilizations.

The Search for Extraterrestrial Intelligence (SETI) project concludes that we should listen for microwave transmissions at wave lengths similar to those given off by radio-television and radar emissions from earth, Drake said.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), in its fiscal 1979 budget request, proposes spending $2.1 million to build a one-million-channel radio receiver for this purpose.

Drake said this is the first time NASA will put money into equipment designed specifically to find advanced civilizations in space.

"The era when we could not address the most important questions is coming to an end," Drake said.

Hospital Stay Ends for Star

Miss Stevens entered the hospital last Monday after complaining of a swollen leg, probably resulting from a fall two weeks ago during a dance act at a Las Vegas hotel.

A spokesman for the entertainer said she responded well to treatment to dissolve the clot and would probably rest at her Malibu home for several days.

PORTRAIT BURNED

LONDON — The portrait of Sir Winston Churchill presented to him by Parliament before his retirement from active political life was burned in an incinerator after it was smashed by Churchill's wife, a former employee of the Churchills says.

Ted Hiles, 62, said in a statement to the Sunday Telegraph:

"I was called to the cellar one day in the autumn of 1955 to help to clear out some rubbish. Lady Churchill and another member of the family were there in the cellar.

"They both reached behind the boiler and pulled out the painting. Lady Churchill then smashed it to the floor. The frame broke up and they threw it on the pile. I was told to take it out immediately.

"I put it all in the trailer of my tractor and took it down to the incinerator pit behind the house. I tipped it all in and set fire to it immediately."

Charles Has 'Problems': Philip

TORONTO — Prince Philip left for home Sunday after publicizing his Duke of Edinburgh's Commonwealth study conference but declined at a news conference Saturday to discuss the future of his son, Prince Charles.

Asked if Charles, 29, might attend the 1980 conference at Kingston, Ont., Philip replied: "He's not in this (the conferences) and he has other problems."

Philip did not elaborate at the news conference, at which reporters had been warned to ask questions concerned only with the conference.

The prince said one of the objectives of the $1.5-million study conference would be to get people who might rise to the top in their various occupations to broaden their outlook and discuss topics with each other before they become committed to any particular philosophy.

Meanwhile, Buckingham Palace says Philip backed out of a television talk show on religion for "personal reasons."

The palace spokesman, in making the announcement Sunday, said the decision to withdraw had "nothing to do with either Princess Margaret or Prince Charles."

British newspapers speculated that Philip did not want to discuss reports that his son and heir to the throne, Charles, may be planning to marry Princess Marie-Astrid of Luxembourg, a Roman Catholic, and that Princess Margaret, the Queen's sister, may get a divorce.

British succession laws ban the marriage of a British monarch as head of the Protestant Anglican church to a Catholic, and Buckingham Palace has denied that Charles will marry the Luxembourg princess. Margaret and her husband, Lord Snowdon, may divorce when their two-year separation is complete.

Drive-Away Escape Bid

NEW PORT RICHEY, Fla. — It was almost like something from the Keystone Cops — a policeman locked helplessly in the back seat of a runaway patrol car, while a wily robbery suspect escaped.

The Pasco County sheriff's department said that last week, two deputies picked up a suspect for questioning in a convenience store robbery. But the suspect, who complained of being sick, said riding in the caged-in back seat, which has no door or window handles, would make him sicker.

Vance's Mideast Criticism Contradicts Carter: Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli cabinet accused the United States of siding with Egypt by condemning Jewish settlements in the occupied territories.

A resolution adopted unanimously at the weekly cabinet meeting Sunday said U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance's statement last week that the Israeli settlements in the Sinai Desert were "contrary to international law and should not exist" constituted "taking sides by a 'mediator.' "

The resolution said Vance's statement was in "complete contradiction" to remarks made by President Carter to Prime Minister Menachem Begin Dec. 16-17 after Begin's presentation of Israel's peace plan.

Begin, the resolution continued, made "specific reference to the continuous existence of the settlements within a United Nations zone, and an Israeli defence force for their protection."

"During the course of the exchange in the White House, not only was no reservation whatsoever made with regard to this reference, but the plan as a whole was received with a positive reaction."

It was Israel's sharpest attack to date on the Carter administration.

In New York, state department spokesman Hodding Carter said Vance's statements were the same that "he has enunciated many times in the past."

"We have played the role of mediator in the Middle East and will continue to do so," Carter said.

The Israeli cabinet also took issue with Vance's call for a homeland for the Palestinians on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River. "There is absolutely no doubt," it said, "that this plan would lead to the establishment of a Palestinian state ruled by the terrorist organizations as the frontline spearhead of a potential military alignment of Jordan, Syria, Saudi Arabia and Iraq."

As Israel and the United States bickered, President Anwar Sadat continued his European tour seeking pressure on Israel to meet Egypt's peace terms.

After visits to Britain, West Germany and Austria, he and President Nicolae Ceausescu of Romania issued a communique calling for resumption of peace negotiations by "all sides concerned" in preparation for a Geneva conference.

Sadat went to Paris Sunday and was visiting Pope Paul at the Vatican this afternoon for the second time in two years before returning to Cairo.

The Pope, while not advocating a separate state for the Palestinians, has spoken often of their "rights and legitimate aspirations." He has also called for a special status for Jerusalem, with international guarantees of unrestricted access to the Christian, Moslem and Jewish holy places. Israel considers Jerusalem the "indivisible capital of the Jewish state."

FLU SPREADS

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Public health officials monitoring a countrywide influenza epidemic report that Russian flu has been identified in a sixth state, Tennessee, and in the District of Columbia, and new outbreaks of influenza are being reported at places where young people live. Widespread outbreaks of all types of flu have occurred in 22 states so far, and smaller outbreaks in 19 other states, the national Centre for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta said.

IRA Killer Squads

BELFAST (Reuter) — Killer squads of guerrillas trained to use sophisticated automatic weapons and sabotage techniques have moved into Northern Ireland as part of a new offensive by the provisional Irish Republican Army.

An IRA leader said in an interview the offensive, which began 11 days ago, was ordered by the organization's Dublin leadership.

The attacks, on troops, policemen and members of the Ulster Defence Regiment (UDR), a part-time militia backing the British army in the province, add a new dimension to IRA operations in Northern Ireland.

Murder Protest

KARACHI (Reuter) — Thousands of demonstrators swept through Karachi Sunday forcing businesses to close in protest against alleged police negligence in the kidnapping and murder of an eight-year-old girl.

Protesters disrupted traffic and more than 80 cinemas were closed. One man who refused to shut his hotel had his furniture destroyed. Black flags were hoisted on rooftops and on traffic signs.

The girl had been held for six days by kidnappers demanding $14,600. She was assaulted and had her eyes gouged out before being strangled and trussed in a sack.

Police responded to criticism of their handling of the case by offering a $2,500 reward for information.

Storms Aid Crops

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recent severe storms throughout the world, including those that have hit the United States, probably have helped agriculture more than hurt, says a government report released Friday.

Storms that struck the world's agricultural areas have recharged soil moisture supplies depleted by last year's unusual dryness in many regions, said the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The NOAA reports, issued periodically as part of an effort to assess the impact of weather on world food supplies, are based on earth satellite data and reports from ground observers and agencies of numerous governments.

NOAA, part of the U.S. commerce department, said weather systems moving across the United States resulted in intense storms in the East. But these systems dumped needed moisture on winter wheat fields in the southern plains.

Recent rain and snow have checked a worsening dry spell begun last fall that hurt nonirrigated wheat in Texas, Colorado, western Oklahoma and western Kansas.

In China and India, countries which had serious rainfall deficiencies last year at this time, moisture conditions in wheat regions are excellent because of recent storms, the report said.

In the Soviet Union, the eastern Ukraine wheat region has come through an entire week of blizzard conditions.

"Though the wind and snow made life miserable for people, the moisture resulting from the storm should benefit winter grains," NOAA said.

In Australia, suffering with drought problems for a year, a late January storm brought several centimetres of rain to southeastern sections, helping dry conditions in New South Wales, Victoria and Tasmania.

In South America, areas of Uruguay and adjacent northern Argentina have received up to 25 centimetres of rain during the last two weeks. The report said this is likely to damage corn and other summer crops, but may benefit winter grains to be planted there in a few months.

Picking the Right Tomato

Inquiries are coming now as to tomato varieties that will ripen outdoors on the plants during summer instead of a few in September, with the remaining fruit still green by frost.

This can best be answered by giving the results in our own ground over a period of 33 years. We are not in a warm spot but we have added humus each year and given water when needed by soaking occasionally at root level in early mornings.

Varieties have changed during the years because the original satisfactory ones are no longer available; but we have always been blessed with early ripe fruit on the outdoor plants by making careful choices. Meteor was the all-time favorite with all who knew the results. It gave the first vine-ripened fruits at the end of July in most years. Alas, it vanished from the seed catalog in the 1960's.

Used in the recent past years are tomato varieties Early Red Chief, a compact bush variety with a long season of picking; Fireball, another early bush type; Cold Set which has proven itself capable of setting fruit in our cool May and early June weather.

Cold Set is also a bush type. These three varieties ran neck and neck towards first fruits, ripening in the third week of August. These would be a first few fruits, but after picking them, others come along rapidly in quantity as the season advances.

Last year a special early selection of Fireball was offered, with the name Early Fireball. Earlir by about one week the fruit was said to be smaller and the foliage less abundant than on the regular Fireball. It might be worth a trial.

None of these tomato varieties bears large fruit for it is impossible in this climate to have earliness of ripening combined with large size. We prefer medium size fully ripened fruit warm from the plants to the plates. Then there is tomato flavor at its highest.

There is a smaller tomato with a spreading bushy habit that is a week earlier than the three first recommended. Name is Stokesalaska, all in one word. Small fruits are in great quantity on each plant, making it perfect for balcony tubs. It has a fine flavor and is thin skinned, very suitable for eating whole as a thirst quencher in late summer, on picnics, and to pack in lunches of all kinds.

If growing your own; from seed, sow about March 21 indoors or in a slightly heated greenhouse. Keep the seedlings moving from first pricking out into 3-inch pots; to 4-inch; to 5-inch, and then if necessary to 7-inch pots to hold until outdoor soil and weather is warm enough for tomato growing. Towards the end of the time, pots will be outdoors all day and in a cool shelter (indoors) at night until the last week when a shrub sheltered spot outdoors may be suitable at night if no frost is around. First fruits the size of a pea are usually seen when the plants are put into the open garden.

There is time now to look around or to send for seed for sowing in March. If plants are to be bought, ask now if the varieties you select will be available. Bought plants will be treated in the same way when you get them home. Grow them to be strong and bushy before planting into the garden.

Bush varieties have another advantage in that they need not spend weeks in making height before producing flowers. The flowers come on the short side branches which are all retained for fruiting. And we do not give fertilizer until after the first few fruits are to be seen. Otherwise the plants continue making more foliage before fruiting.

By this painstaking method it is possible to have fully ripened fruits on early tomato varieties before the summer passes; and every fruit ripens on the plants before normal frost dates in fall.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale: start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your adveertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Friday; 8:00 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

309 IN MEMORIAM

STEVENS — In loving memory of a wonderful son, Leslie John Stevens, who passed away February 13, 1964. No one knows our longings as we write these simple lines. For our dear son's love, and friendship. You shared our dreams, our hopes, our tears. God bless you dear son, for giving us those precious years.
—Sadly missed by mother and dad.

VINCENT — In loving memory of Lillian, who passed away Feb. 9, 1975.
Peacefully sleeping, resting at last,
The world's weary trouble and trials are past,
In silence she suffered, in patience she bore,
Till God called her home to suffer no more.
—Always remembered by husband Sidney and family.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

Prison Plans Family Visits

VANCOUVER (CP) — An experimental program is planned at the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre in Burnaby whereby prisoners will be able to have extended visits with their families.

Ted Harrison, Vancouver region director of the provincial corrections branch, said Saturday renovations are underway to accommodate the program, which could begin before the summer.

Harrison said if the program, which will be limited to sentenced male prisoners, works out, it will be extended to offenders in the women's wing of the provincial jail and to prisoners awaiting trial.

"But, no, we don't call it a conjugal visiting centre," said Harrison. "It's a family visiting centre which will be used initially for either legitimate marriages or for long-term or pre-existing common-law relationships between a man and a woman."

Harrison said for a man serving two years less a day, who has a wife and family on the outside, "that could be a very, very lengthy period of time in terms of the growth and development of the kids."

"By providing an opportunity for them to meet here, under secure conditions, the father can maintain some level of relationship with his kids and with his wife and the kids can understand or relate to the father a bit."

"We might be able to reduce some of the frustration and tension he feels in the area of sexuality," he said. "We might be able to make the period of time here more tolerable and perhaps his behavior a little better if he knows that good behavior will result in him being considered for family visits."

The building under renovation—once a dormitory for prisoners in a drug treatment program—will have two separate bedrooms and a combined living room-dining room-kitchen area. It is being furnished by government funds and the prisoner welfare fund.

"It will be staffed on an external security basis by appropriate security officers and we'll be taking steps to make sure that alcohol and drugs, etc., are not consumed within the building," Harrison said.

He said he envisaged visits lasting 12 to 48 hours—weekdays as well as weekends—and that the accommodation would be available, for example, not only to wives and children but to out-of-town parents of young prisoners.

Linn said two staff members visited Regina to look at a similar program in the provincial jail there and came away impressed, though recognizing that "the 'Saskatoba' farmer is a little different to our sophisticated offender."

"We had our doubts here, some of us, because we wondered about the contraband and everything," he said, "but we're nevertheless going to try it. If it flops, we'll just stop doing it."

"You can bet we're not going to put some character in there that's been banging us over the head, or even one we consider to be a hazard. So we have to be very circumspect in who we pick.

"One bad mistake and the whole program could go down the tube."

Rolls Survives Slur of Recall

TORONTO (CP) — Last week's announcement from the Rolls-Royce auto firm that it is recalling about 2,500 Silver Shadow, Camargue and Corniche models built in the last year, has not shaken Canadian owners' faith in the famed British car.

In a recent interview, Linda Addario, chairman of the 125-member Upper Canada region of the Rolls-Royce Owners' Association, said she is still hesitant about believing the recall report.

"But even if it were true," she said, "a little error of that kind cannot mar the long history of excellence of the finest car that has ever hit the road."

Rolls-Royce said the cars were recalled because of the chance of a fault in the automatic speed control system. More than 70 of the vehicles involved in the recall were exported to Canada.

In Toronto, the 1977 basic retail price of a Silver Shadow was $54,500. A Camargue sold for $101,200 and a Cornich cost between $78,750 and $83,000.

Fred Utton, sales manager of Grand Touring Automobiles, the Toronto distributor of Rolls-Royce autos, said the recall was typical of Rolls-Royce thoroughness.

After all, he said, Henry Royce, the man who perfected the original car, not only wore a belt and suspenders to hold his trousers up but attached them to his shirt with saftey pins as well.

GOOD TIME was had by all when members of Victoria Four-Wheel Drive Club loaded up with handicapped children to visit the gold mining gullies of Leechtown as a special weekend outing for Handicapped Recreation Society. Race Issue Swings U.K.

LONDON (AP) — An opinion poll published today shows the opposition Conservative party with an 11-percentage-point lead over the ruling Labor party—a dramatic reversal from figures in a poll last month that showed the Labor party ahead by two per cent.

Political observers attributed the switch to remarks Jan. 30 by Conservative party Leader Margaret Thatcher, who said in a television interview that Britain may be "swamped" by immigrants in the near future.

Virtually all immigrants to Britain are non-whites, with only a few hundred whites applying each year.

The National Opinion Poll, published in The London Daily Mail, said 50 per cent of those questioned would vote for the Conservatives and 39 per cent would vote for Labor. On Jan. 18, the same poll gave 44 per cent to the Conservatves and 46 per cent to Labor.

Mrs. Thatcher also said in a speech Sunday that if the Conservative party comes to power in the next elections it will try to end all immigration to Britain. But she said the party would honor all existing legal commitments to immigrants.

There are 1.9 million non-whites in Britain, which has a population of 56 million.

PQ Breakup Predicted

MONTREAL (CP) — The Parti Quebecois could come apart once its goal of political sovereignty and economic association is clearly spelled out, an early supporter of Quebec independence said Sunday.

Pierre Bourgault, who led the leftist Rassemblement pour l'Independence Nationale (RIN) during the 1960s, said in an interview the Parti Quebecois is a "very fragile party, with a left, a right and a centre."

Within the party are "people from very different backgrounds and maybe with different aims too," he said. "I suppose the government and the party will be very careful."

Bourgault, speaking to about 300 PQ organizers at a day-long meeting in preparation for the promised independence referendum, said that being a Quebecer does not depend on one's ethnic origins, but rather is a question of choice.

The meeting, organized by the PQ's Montreal Centre regional organization, was held to familiarize members with party positions on the referendum, which will probably take place next year.

Camille Laurin, minister of cultural development, said the meeting was the first of many leading up to the referendum.

"We have to make people conscious of the stakes," he said. "I think it will be a battle of ideas in the long run."

S.A. Shares Protested

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A group of students and faculty members at University of Western Ontario is urging the administration to divest itself of $700,000 worth of shares and debentures in corporations operating or dealing with South Africa, a group spokesman said.

Daryl Copeland, speaking for the Coalition for Change, said the group has been organizing opposition to South Africa's apartheid system over the last two months.

He said the group is circulating a petition which will be presented to the university's board of governors. About 500 signatures have already been obtained.

Meanwhile, about 20 faculty members have signed a letter which will accompany the petition, he said.

Copeland said the companies that the university has invested in include Inco Ltd., General Motors Acceptance Corp., Noranda Mines Ltd., Seagram Co. Ltd., Canadian Pacific Ltd., Royal Bank of Canada, Bank of Montreal, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce and Toronto Dominion Bank.

UNITY DOLLARS SOUGHT

The Beavers need bucks to do their bit for unity.

The Surrey Beavers Rugby Football Club that is, the team that stole the show at a Task Force on Canadian Unity hearing in Vancouver last week by challenging a Quebec squad to a game on the Plains of Abraham to be followed by a boat race.

Quebec's Ormstown Saracens have accepted the challenge, but before the Beavers can get to the bout they need to raise air fare — and for a team of 20 that's not small change.

Beaver spokesman Gordon Stewart said the club needs about $10,000 and he's appealing to the federal government, and anybody else who'll listen, for donations.

So far nobody's even offered to buy them a beer.

Stewart, however, says he's confident Ottawa will come through.

"This proposal will probably do more for national unity than all their task forces combined and I feel sure they're going to see fit to come forth and support us."

Stewart said the Beavers also hope to raise enough for the Saracens to be able to pay a reciprocal visit to B.C. — for more rugby and more boat races, which is what life in Canada is all about if you're into loose rucks, mauls and all that.

The games would probably be scheduled for late spring.

The ground rules are that the teams play two 40-minute halves, have a bilingual referee and the boat race be done with Canadian beer.

"I might add," said Stewart in his brief, "that it wouldn't really matter if the referee spoke English and French or Swahili and Afrikaans — we would afford him respect concomitant to the respect his lowly station in life merits."

Stewart said his presentation to the task force in Vancouver last week had caused a lot of laughs, and if had been meant to, but underlying it all was a firm belief that the Beavers could actually make a worthwhile contribution to solving the unity dilemma.

Smooth Return to Work As B.C. Tel Strike Ends

An 81-day strike-lockout at the B.C. Telephone Co. ended so smoothly today that a company official said it was just like any other Monday morning.

B.C. Tel spokesman Keith Mathews said in Vancouver there were no incidents or problems reported from anywhere in the province as the bulk of the 10,000-member Telecommunications Workers Union (TWU) returned to the job. All will be back at work by Wednesday.

"We're just starting a normal day," said Mathews.

The bitter and protracted labor dispute was resolved Sunday when the two sides agreed on return-to-work conditions and signed a three-year collective agreement.

A joint statement by the union, B.C. Tel and Canadian Telephones and Supplies Ltd., said the signing came after 10 hours of continuous negotiations.

"Both sides are confident that the agreement reached will be the start of a new industrial relations climate between the parties," the statement said.

At a meeting Saturday, union members voted 91.4 per cent in favor of accepting the contract.

The contentious issue of contracting-out work was resolved with a clause providing for a union-management committee to mediate disputes in that area.

Mathews said management personnel, who worked a lot of overtime during the strike-lockout, will not be allowed any immediate holidays. He said everyone will be needed to deal with the company's backlog of work.

In Victoria, a company representative said the installation of new phones and the repair of malfunctioning units will get top priority. New orders for telephone installations will be dealt with only after the backlog has been cleared.

The spokesman said B.C. Tel's construction program and the installation and up-grading of electronic exchanges will continue where they were left off.

A tentative agreement between the company and union was reached 11 days ago, but the two sides had been unable to agree on conditions governing the strikers' return to work.

Nancy Stebbings. . .back in business

At issue was the company's insistence that each member of the union sign an interim contract pledging no job action that would deter service, accept 1976 pay rates

ROAD TO RECOVERY

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau appealed to the 10 provincial premiers today to co-operate in designing an economic recovery plan — "an insurance policy that will serve us well tomorrow."

But some premiers said action is needed right now — not tomorrow — to deal with major unemployment and inflation.

Trudeau called for new efforts to defeat unemployment and inflation at the start of a three-day federal-provincial conference. As he spoke, there was a demonstration of unemployed outside the federal conference centre. Earlier, the prime minister, his provincial counterparts, their ministers and aides, had to thread their way past about 100 placard-waving, chanting demonstrators calling for jobs.

"Hey, Pierre, we want jobs," shouted one demonstrator as the prime minister's car nudged through a circle of out-of-work protestors.

But Trudeau said in his conference-opening statement that "Canada is not chronically ill . . . in fact Canada is on the path to full recovery."

He conceded there is economic uncertainty, indicating it is due in part to the affects of a major world recession.

Trudeau said these conditions have made Canadians understandably anxious about the future.

"This very anxiety saps our creative energies."

Trudeau said he feels the country's institutions, governments, and people are flexible enough to meet current economic challenges.

"Canada is not a sick country in a healthy world."

"Evidence mounts that in a measured way, Canada can reattain its potential with continuing reductions in both unemployment and inflation."

"Our task is two-fold — first to ensure that the recovery occurs, second to ensure that it is sustained," he said.

In a brief speech at the opening of the conference, Finance Minister Jean Chretien also said that it would take "a major national effort" to restore price stability and full employment to the national economy.

Federal officials said in advance of the meeting — the first such session open to television and the press since 1974 — that the conference is designed to dispel what they termed "a wave of pessimism" about the country's economic future.

Federal finance officials published a stragegy last week for economic recovery that sets targets of 3½ per cent for inflation by 1981 and an umemployment rate dropping toward 5½ per centby then.

But the government paper was not specific about how to reach these goals.

There have been reports that Industry Minister Jack Horner will propose a national industrial council to the provinces. It would try to develop specific policies for stimulating weak or lagging industries.

Snowblower in Path Caused Plane Crash?

Times News Services

A Pacific Western Airlines aircraft, which crashed at Cranbrook Saturday, killing 41 people, was apparently warned before landing that a snowblower was clearing snow on the Cranbrook airport runway, a transport department spokesman said today.

The spokesman said "we understand that there was a snowblower either on the runway or just off the runway when this happened." He said the aircraft landed five minutes early.

But the air radio operator in Cranbrook has reported he informed the pilot while the aircraft was some distance away from Cranbrook that a snowblower was clearing the runway, the department spokesman said.

The pilot replied that he would speak to the air radio operator before landing so that the snowblower would be removed, the spokesman said. But as far as the department knew, the pilot did not speak to the radio operator again.

The transport department spokesman said the department must still examine the flight date recorder and cockpit voice recorder from the aircraft and the air radio operator's tape to find out more about what happened.

The tapes are being flown to Ottawa where they will be opened, perhaps later today, the spokesman said. The department does not know whether the flight data recorder escaped undamaged as it "underwent extreme heat," he said.

Mute memorial, a doll amid the wreckage where 41 died.

"On touchdown the captain saw the snowblower and attempted to abort the landing," said Jack Cooke, PWA's western regional vice-president. "He cleared the snowblower and was seen to tail off to the left. The plane exploded on the ground."

There were seven survivors among the 43 passengers and five crew members on board.

Passenger David White, 20, of Calgary, said that when the plane touched down, part of a reverse-thrust casing, a sheath over the engine that flips down upon landing to help slow the plane, came off.

"We started to climb, the plane then rocked really badly," he said. "We banked to the left — the power from the one engine that was working probably twisted the plane around."

Alan Jay, a transport department spokesman, identifed the four dead crew members as Captain Chris Miles, 31, and first officer Peter Van Oort, 25, both of Edmonton, and flight attendants Cindy Jean Wolff, 21 of Calgary and Patty Wong, 22, of Vancouver.

Three of the survivors walked away from the wreckage, most of which was engulfed in an orange ball of flame that shot 60 metres into the air.

All the survivors were in the tail section which broke off as the aircraft disintegrated and slewed into a snowbank at the end of the runway.

The survivors were six passengers and flight attendant Gail Bunn, of Edmonton. She and White walked out of the tail section through an emergency door.

Once outside they found an 11-year-old girl still strapped to a three-seat section beside her dead mother. The three walked to rescue vehicles.

Two others crawled through the snow to the nearby forest to get away from the fireball.

Miss Bunn and White, along with passenger Kathy Mailey of Cranbrook, were treated in hospital and released.

Cut Spending — Bennett

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier William Bennett of British Columbia called today for a new national economic policy to help Canada fit into a changing, more competitive world.

Referring to earlier remarks by some of the premiers, Bennett said the various governments "cannot just trot out regional shopping lists, as I have heard here today, but must develop a national policy."

He said the last time a national strategy had been worked out was in 1879, when the country's first prime minister, Sir John A. Macdonald, devised a program that protected and helped develop industry in Central Canada through protective tariffs.

A comprehensive national economic policy could set out a program or a set of goals that the people could rally behind, Bennett said.

He also criticized the role of government spending in the economy, saying that unless governments follow restraint, their share of national economy will rise to 45 per cent by 1980 from about 40 per cent now.

Government programs and costs are beginning to effect the ability of the over-all economy to compete, Bennett said.

Smith Mum On Friend's Hiring

Speaker Ed Smith had only a series of no comments today when reporters asked about his hiring of friend and former secretary Barbara Pennock for a job in the auditor-general's department.

Friday in Fort St. John, where he and Miss Pennock were attending his mother's funeral, Smith told reporters he had no qualms about hiring her for a temporary position in the auditor-general's office.

But today in Victoria, Smith refused to elaborate.

Meanwhile, opposition members say Premier Bennett, not Auditor-General Erma Morrison, should conduct an inquiry into the appointment.

Opposition leader Dave Barrett said "unless we get a full explanation on the matter, we can only assume the premier was responsible for the appointment of Miss Pennock to the office."

The auditor-general is a watchdog on government spending and by definition must remain free of any political influence.

House leader Bill King (NDP — Revelstoke-Slocan) said Miss Pennock's presence compromises the integrity of the office and said she should be removed immediately.

But Mrs. Morrison is taking a different view. She said she will continue her investigation into the hiring but added she didn't expect to find anything adverse.

"I have no reason to doubt Miss Pennock's loyalty to myself or to the office," she added.

Calling the situation "a bit of a tempest in a teapot," Mrs. Morrison said there is no way the office could be damaged because Miss Pennock is not in a position to do any damage.

But she said she has to clear any suggestion that there was any political involvement.

500-POUND MISTAKE

CAGLIARI, Italy (Reuter) — A U.S. fighter-bomber accidentally dropped a 500-pound bomb on the Mediterranean island of Sardinia last Saturday, officials said today.

Red Spies Have Tripled: CTV

Times News Services

Information gathered by Canadian counter-espionage agents shows that the number of Russian spies in Canada has tripled since the 1960s, the CTV television program, Prime Time Inquiry, said Sunday.

The program said more attempts are being made by the Russians to corrupt or bribe Canadians into working for the Communists.

The program said the main target of Soviet intelligence is Canada's industrial knowledge, especially in the petroleum industry.

Russian spies are in Canada to collect economic and technological information that can be used to improve industry and living conditions in the Soviet Union, the program said.

The program said that in 1965 there were 749 Russian citizens working in Canada for the Soviet government and at least 28 of them were known spies. Ten years later, there were 2,900 Russians in Canada and 60 of them are known spies.

In a related development, the Toronto Globe and Mail today quotes RCMP sources as saying the Soviet Union has a thorough knowledge of security operations in Canada.

The sources are quoted as saying the recent expulsion of 13 Russian officials foiled only one of several attempts in recent years to infiltrate security operations and the Russians have double agents in the security service.

The newspaper quotes the sources as saying the RCMP also develops double agents in much the same way as the Soviets and a communist diplomat who is about to defect is currently working for the force.

Meanwhile, at the United Nations, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said Sunday he has been kept informed by Ottawa of news reports that the RCMP had recruited a Communist diplomat as a double agent.

"I understand the RCMP has categorically denied that later story, but I have not been personally in conversation with them about it," Jamieson told a news conference. "They say it is a fabrication."

The Edmonton Journal, which broke the story last week of a spy ring that led to the expulsion of 13 Soviet Union personnel, said the unidentified diplomat was either from the Soviet Union or from another Eastern-bloc state.

The Ottawa Journal quoted unidentified sources as saying the RCMP had enlisted a double agent said to be attached to the Soviet Union embassy in Ottawa.

Jamieson told reporters that the only thing he can say is that "we ought not to be surprised that now there will be other stories and rumors."

Necessity of building a better gas engine mothered the Dawal Motor invention of Frank Davies and partner Joe Walcer. Their novel theory, illustrated in cutaway model held by Davies, produced a more efficient long-stroke engine of fewer parts, more power and less unburned emission. Walcer's hand rests on mockup of 85 h.p. version of the working prototype perfected during the past 12 months.

Revolutionary Engine Born in a Lunch Pail

By AB KENT, Times Staff

A butcher and a retired mink farmer — both in their 60s — have invented what they say is the most practical development in gasoline engines in 100 years.

Furthermore, the pair working with amateur zeal in a draughty Central Saanich farm shed have without formal training built a cheaper, lighter, more powerful, more efficient engine than professional engineers, physicists or the automotive industry have yet come up with.

Their recently-finished Dawal Motor is the result of two years of theorizing, patent-examination and experimentation for Frank Davies, 64, and Joe Walcer, 63.

And they have thoroughly enjoyed doing it, from the moment they sketched the theory on a dinner napkin to the granting of patents by three countries.

The motor looks like a small motorcycle or outboard boat engine without the bulky crankcases of either. And it purrs like a big, fine-tuned V-8.

But in theory it bears closer resemblance to the rotary engine which made its appearance in Germany 20 years ago, and more recently in a Japanese car, a development of the Wankel.

Both men wanted a machine that would burn less fuel, cause less wear and friction, make less noise and be more efficient than anything before.

The Dawal and Wankel are based on the idea of a single crank pushed by a smooth flow of internal combustion power strokes.

Instead of the Wankel's Y-shaped piston rotating in a single cylinder, the Dawal comes closer to perfection by using parallel, twin pistons in double-ended cylinders joined by a T-shaped connecting rod.

The top of the T is pivoted on a sliding block and the crank pin is attached to the tail of the T.

There are only five major moving parts, and no valves, just cylinder ports for inlet and exhaust.

In operation, the motor fires rapidly, in much closer succession and with pistons moving at far higher speed than conventional automotive engines, producing virtually continuous torque on the crankshaft.

As a two-cycle engine, it develops four-cylinder power comparable with some of the heavier multi-cylinder outboards, for example, at a fraction of the weight.

The prototype Dawal weighing some 60 pounds measures about a foot square, and about as deep with flywheel and supercharger-timing pulleys. It compares with a 9 h.p. outboard but turns out an astonishing 59 h.p., according to computer analysis.

Davies and Walcer have a mockup of their second Dawal, which will have main castings of aluminum, weigh about 80 pounds, measure 14½ by 14½ by 5½ inches, and turn out 85 h.p. — virtually unheard of power-to-weight ratio for running a small car.

How could two non-professionals new to inventing and unkown to each other until two years ago come up with a patentable machine in a field where the pros have striven and failed?

In the first place, by amazing coincidence, both men had the same idea for an improved engine, and they took the classic approach to developing it, from discussing the theory, to drawing the plans, to building the engine.

"We didn't know if it was going to work at first," said Davies. "We just had the confidence in our theory."

"We figured it should run without a flywheel," Walcer explained.

"And it did, from the very start . . . the first pull on the cord . . . it fired and ran right then and there," Davies added.

A neighbor was there to take a picture, and the inventors' patent attorney Brian Woods of Vancouver stood by as the little engine sputtered to life. Walcer and Davies, as excited as a couple of schoolboys, remain buoyed with enthusiasm to this day.

"We've had a real thrill building this thing," said Walcer, recalling how the two of them got together.

He said he was working on a new house for his friend Jack McCauley and asked for a good helper. McCauley sent him Davies and one spring day while they were roofing together, Walcer mentioned conversationally that General Motors had announced that morning it was paying $5 million for development of the Wankel.

"I said I had studied it and couldn't see it. I said, 'they're crazy — the damn thing doesn't work — too high revs.'

"I agree,' Frank said.

" 'I have an idea that will beat the Wankel', I said.

"And he said, 'I do, too.' "

The day was warm and they climbed down to the lawn with their lunches, heads full of innovations. They talked and as Walcer related it, "Frank looked in his lunchbox and he had a nice piece of cake wrapped up. He took it out and drew the first print on the dinner napkin. We both had the same idea."

They agreed they had to get to work on it, and after more discussion, Davies drew up proper plans, they went to Vancouver to buy a metal lathe, acquired a drill press and welding equipment.

Patent searches had disclosed nothing similar to what they proposed and in March of last year the U. S. patent office granted them patent number 4,011,842. Canada and Japan have also granted patents for the Dawal Motor.

Where the two go from here depends upon how they choose to market the invention, which has cost them $13,000 to date. One man who is interested in the Dawal as a potential source of heavy engine power is Claude Butler, to whom they are indebted. They raided his Butler Bros. Logging Ltd. truck repair scrap heap three times to get pieces they could fashion into parts for their motor.

'Got to be Better Way' —Returning Tel Clerk

"I'm happy to be back but, you know, there's got to be a better way to solve labor disputes," B.C. Tel clerk Liz LaPointe said today.

She was in the first wave of union workers who returned to their jobs this morning as the 81-day strike-lockout came to an end.

She was among the first wave of union workers who returned to their jobs this morning as the 81-day strike-lockout came to an end.

"I don't think many employees lost too much financially," she said. "But the whole thing was rather unpleasant. I don't know why it had to last so long."

Her sentiments were echoed by Rick Dack, 31, a member of B.C. Tel's installation and repair crews.

"This thing should have been over long ago," he said.

"I didn't mind it for a while but it is good to get back into a regular routine again."

Dack said most union employees expected a strike or lockout — they had been without a contract since the beginning of January, 1977 — and they had started saving money.

Few people had to borrow but most went through their savings.

"We didn't lose very much, really. Most of us did some repairs around the house, painting and remodelling. Normally we would have had to pay someone to do it. I saved myself quite a bit of money."

Mrs. LaPointe, 43, said she also was prepared for the work stoppage, helped by the fact her husband is steadily employed by B.C. Forest Products.

"It wasn't the money I missed so much as the fact my routine was interrupted. When you are used to working for so many years . . . well, I was like a fish out of water. It was hard to realize my time was my own."

She said any bitter feelings which arose during the dispute will soon disappear but she hoped she wouldn't have to go through the experience again.

Dack said he wasn't looking forward to another strike-lockout either but expected there will be one.

Employees who did go into debt were looking forward to their retroactive paycheque to help bail them out.

They signed a three-year contract retroactive to Jan. 1, 1977, and they will get 45 cents an hour for every hour worked last year. That means a retro cheque of $877.50 or about $600 after the holdback for taxes. Retro cheques usually take more than a month to prepare.

In addition to 45 cents an hour for 1977, all employees were awarded a raise of 32 cents an hour for 1978 and a six per cent pay increase for 1979.

Despite the increase, the union employees had mixed feelings about whether it had all been worthwhile.

For management, public information officer Ken Horodyski said he is convinced nobody gains from a work stoppage.

"Certainly the customers suffer. The employees can never make up the lost pay and management people have had strained relationships in their family lives because of the long hours they have to work.

"A few people will be bitter but hopefully most of us can get together again. I think we will. The vote to return to work was 91.4 per cent so that means that the majority are happy to be back. The ones you hear complaining make up, what, 8.6 per cent?"

The return began at 7 a.m. when telephone operators came to work, replacing the male supervisors who had been answering phones for the past 81 days.

Repair lines were in operation by 7:30 a.m. and the repair crews warming up their trucks by 8 a.m.

'Bomb' a Dud

Police and armed forces explosives experts spent a tense two hours Saturday removing a harmless bottle from the rear of B.C. Telephone Co. downtown offices.

The label said the bottle contained nitroglycerine, but contents proved otherwise when the it was destroyed a half-mile away at the heliport in Victoria West.

Police were called about 11:25 a.m. when a security guard found the bottle near a doorway on Johnson. A team from the CFB Esquimalt fleet diving unit collected the bottle and placed it aboard a special disposal truck after the area was cordoned off.

Police also blocked all intersections leading to Johnson Street en route to the heliport, allowing the disposal truck to proceed without interruption.

AIRWEST SETTLMENT 'PREMATURE'

AirWest has resolved some issues with its Teamster employees but other areas of dispute remain, a company spokesman said today.

He said reports on the weekend that an agreement had been reached were premature.

The company and union negotiators held meetings today in an effort to resolve the outstanding issues.

Supervisory personnel have been operating the air service since the strike began Nov. 13.

Arsonist Suspected In Fires

Arson investigators have been assigned to two weekend fires that appear to have been deliberately set, one of them in the banquet and entertainment wing of a downtown hotel.

Victoria fire department deputy chief Mike Belton said fire in the Tally-ho Travelodge, 3020 Douglas, caused at least $5,000 damage shortly after 2 a.m. Sunday.

Flames appear to have started in a stack of tables in the hall adjoining a north side banquet room, spread to walls and ceiling and filled the rooms above — including offices and cocktail bar — with smoke.

A tenant at Rosemount Apartments, 470 Gorge East, used a pump can extinguisher Friday night to put out burning carpeting on a stairway where owner A. K. Kingsley, 460 Gorge East, said a similar fire was extinguished in 1975.

Brenda Leader, 23, of 2945 Shelbourne, was treated for burns to the back of her hand received in a kitchen fire Friday afternoon. Firemen said deep-frying fat overheated and burst into flame, burning cupboards and causing about $1,000 damage.

Tory Flags Pilfered

Three flags mounted above the Progressive Conservative party's Oak Bay riding headquarters at 3195 Shelbourne were stolen overnight Sunday.

The flags — the Maple Leaf, the B.C. flag and the Union Jack — were worth about $25 each and were last seen at about 5:30 p.m. Sunday, a party spokesman said.

"Somebody wants to give us a lot of attention," he added.

Saanich police have been asked to investigate.

CRYSTAL GARDENS GIRDERS SOUND

The Crystal Gardens structure is much stronger than first thought and it can be shored up with only minor repairs, architect David Hambleton said today.

He said it was originally estimated that steel would have to be removed for sandblasting and then reinstalled. However, most of the work can be done with wire brushes without removing the steel, he said.

The discovery will help keep the project within its over-all budget of $2 million, he said.

"We cannot spend more than the $2 million for everything, including renovations as well as all the other things. I'm certain we will be able to stay within that budget now."

He said a few steel beams that have been corroded will have to be replaced but most are sound.

Casings around the steel are being removed and the steel will be painted after it is brushed.

The old Crystal will be turned into conservatory, teahouse and meeting after the structural renovations are completed. The building is owned by provincial government.
